NEW FOR 2019 – KINETIC DEVELOPMENT GROUP UPDATES THE SCAR MREX M-LOK SYSTEM

The SCAR MREX (Modular Receiver Extension) has successfully served the shooting community and Special Operations units in combat for over four years. The MREX has made the SCAR 16 and 17 a more versatile modular platform, accommodating a variety of accessories with M-Lok, direct mount, and Picatinny mounting options. The MREX greatly improves the shooting ergonomics and balance of the SCAR rifle. Over the years, KDG, creator of the MREX, has been listening to the needs of both commercial and military customers, tallying the most important desired features to incorporate into the MREX MKII.

Kinetic Development Group is proud to release the SCAR MREX MKII. There are a few obvious differences / updates from the original MREX.

M-Lok slots are present in more locations than the previous model, spanning the entire length of the MREX MKII. M-Lok has been added to the 2 o'clock and 10 o'clock position as a new mounting location and shield from the gas block. The MKII has the desired step-down forward of the front folding sight like the MREX, but no Picatinny. The traditional Picatinny in this 12 o'clock position has been replaced with M-Lok slots, allowing for more mounting options. The MKII will be offered in three different lengths instead of two. The lengths available will be the MKII 6.5, 4.25, and 2.2. These designations signify the length the MREX MKII extends (in inches) beyond the SCAR upper receiver. All versions of the SCAR MREX MKII will be available in Type III hard coat anodized black and Magpul Flat Dark Earth Cerakote.

MREX MKII will be available March 2019 from kineticdg.com and Kinetic Development Group's loyal dealers and distributors. For more information, visit <https://kineticdg.com/mrex-mkii> or email at info@kineticdg.com

NOW SHIPPING CRIMSON TRACE LASERGUARD FOR SMITH & WESSON M&P SHIELD EZ

Crimson Trace®, America's recognized leading brand of laser sights, today announced that it is now shipping the Laserguard® LG-459 laser sight with red diode and the LG-459G laser sight with green diode, both designed for secure fit onto the Smith & Wesson® M&P Shield® EZ® pistol. These easy-to-install laser sights secure onto the pistol's trigger guard, are activated with Crimson Trace's Instinctive Activation™ engagement system, provide reliable operation, and are extremely lightweight at approximately one ounce, including the installed battery. The new Laserguard LG-459/G laser sights are designed to fit onto Smith & Wesson M&P Shield EZ pistols chambered in .380 caliber.

Customers can purchase the LG-459/G red and green laser sights in retail stores and outlets across America, on commercial websites that sell Crimson Trace products, and in the company's online store at www.crimsontrace.com. MSRP begins at $229 for the Laserguard LG-459 laser sight with red diode.

SIG SAUER INTRODUCES 120GR SUPERSONIC 300BLK SBR ELITE COPPER DUTY AMMUNITION FOR SHORT-BARREL RIFLES

SIG SAUER, Inc. is pleased to introduce its newest 300BLK ammunition—the 120gr supersonic 300BLK SBR Elite Copper Duty load, specifically designed for short-barrel rifles. Available to the commercial market for the first time, this supersonic duty round is engineered for reliable, controlled, 1.8x expansion, and superior feeding out of rifles with sub-9-inch barrels.

The supersonic SBR Elite Copper Duty ammunition features an all-copper bullet and black oxide shell case to visually denote SBR capability. Velocity is 1,897 fps with muzzle energy of 959 ft-lbs out of a 6¾-inch barrel.

SIG Elite Copper Duty ammunition uses flash-reduced propellant to minimize visible signature while shooting in low-light situations. Premium-quality primers are also used to minimize variations in velocity.

The SIG SAUER 120gr supersonic 300BLK SBR Elite Copper Duty ammunition is now available for purchase at sigsauer.com/store.

THE INLAND M1911A1 A MIL-SPEC, .45 ACP PISTOL

By Jim Dickson
Mike Anschuetz

18 Types of Ammo, over 2,000 Rounds, and Accuracy tested Out to Over 300 Yards!

The Inland Arms M1911A1 is a World War 2 Mil-Spec M1911A1 with a Colt 1980's style firing pin block safety added for extra protection when the gun is dropped from a great height. All G.I. parts can be interchanged on this gun. Best of all it is a loose fitted gun with room for sand, rust, dust, mud, and all the things that get in a gun in combat. I will not willingly carry a M1911A1 that I can't wiggle the slide on when it is in battery. I can wiggle the slide at the rear on this gun and that is an acid test for combat ready tolerances. That does not mean the gun is inaccurate. Far from it. This gun shoots good groups out to 300 yards and would shoot them further had a longer range been available. The U.S. military considers anything inside an 18-inch circle will take out an enemy soldier. This gun puts them inside 15 inches at 300 yards. While most people cannot shoot that well, it is nice to have a gun that can.

In order to dispel all talk of the M1911A1 being just a close-range defensive gun, a Ransom rest was used in order to test the gun and not the shooter. This is the first time the M1911A1 has been tested at this long a range to my knowledge and the results were impressive. The 200, 250, and 300 yard groups were all shot with Aguila 230 grain FMJ ammo. This is a good, average, representative type of ammo. The 50 yard targets were shot with 18 different types of ammo and showed that individual guns have preferences in ammo. Although all the ammo gave good groups, some were better than others. Groups were measured from the outside of the group. To get the size from the center of the bullet holes subtract .45" from the group sizes shown here. Remember, these groups were fired at 50 yards NOT the usual 25 yards. After firing from the Ransom Rest was completed the remaining ammo was shot free hand.

I had 2,090 rounds from 18 different manufacturers. Let's take a look at the results.

Obviously, the gun could extend the range further but space limitations prevailed and we had to stop. The lack of difference between the 250-yard and 304-yard groups showed that the bullets had stabilized in flight and further dispersal at longer ranges would be minimal. All 3 long range groups were shot with Aguila 230-grain FMJ ammo.

Unlike many of the commercial M1911A1 pistols this gun has the Mil-Spec tolerances in the magazine well. I have a quantity of .45 magazines that are to the maximum allowable G.I. dimensions and they work fine in G.I. Surplus guns but not in many commercial ones. They also work fine in the Inland M1911A1.

The ability to use any available magazine is an important attribute to a gun. Inland has also beveled the magazine well just enough to make it easy to insert the magazines quickly and easily.

The gun is as well made as any commercial Colt and has a good parkerized finish. This is the best finish for any service pistol as it holds oil, resists rusts and wear, and does not reflect light.

Trigger pull was a crisp, clean 5 pounds as measured with a Lyman trigger pull gauge from Brownells (Brownells.com). This made it easy to hit with.

The M1911A1 has long been recognized as the most reliable pistol ever made in adverse conditions. Part of that is its ability to throw sand and dirt out of the mechanism as it operates instead of jamming it in tight until the gun quits. The M1911A1 simply does this better than any pistol in history in my opinion. There are other reasons as well. It's single position feed magazine is much more foolproof and reliable than the double column magazines popular today. If a partially loaded double column single position feed magazine is dropped or given a hard jolt it can cause the cartridges to get out of position and jam the magazine. I have seen this happen. None of these can be left loaded indefinitely like the M1911 magazines can and still be depended upon to function reliably. I use some 1911 magazines that have been kept constantly loaded since WWII and one Luger magazine that has always been kept constantly loaded for over 100 years. Like the rest of the gun the M1911 magazine is not stopped by the appearance of sand in it.

The Browning toggle has places for dirt to be shunted out of the way unlike the sliding cam design. It also forms a bridge between the separate ramps of the barrel and the receiver keying them together for more strength than if it was a solid ramp. Another place with room for dirt is the recoil spring guide and plug. There is no guide rod to bend and jam the gun if the gun is dropped. The extractor is similar to a Mauser rifle in that the cartridge comes up under the extractor instead of the extractor having to try to snap over it. This is the most reliable and trouble-free extractor ever put on a pistol.

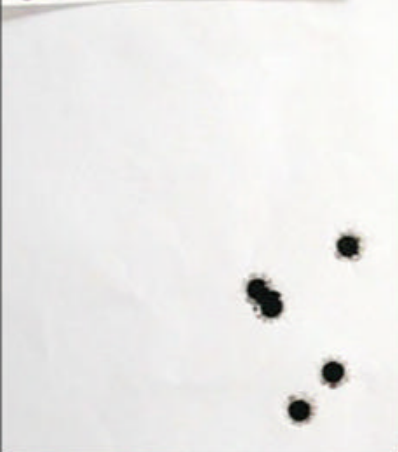

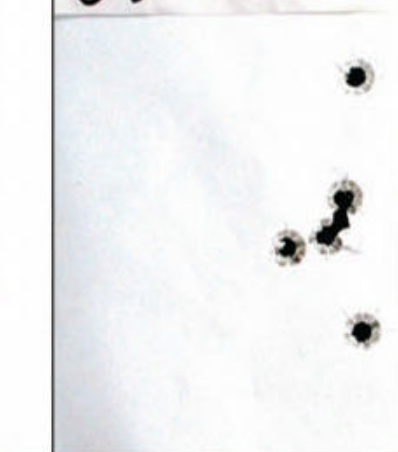

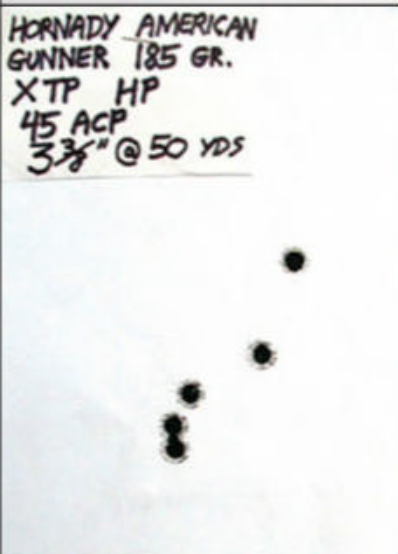

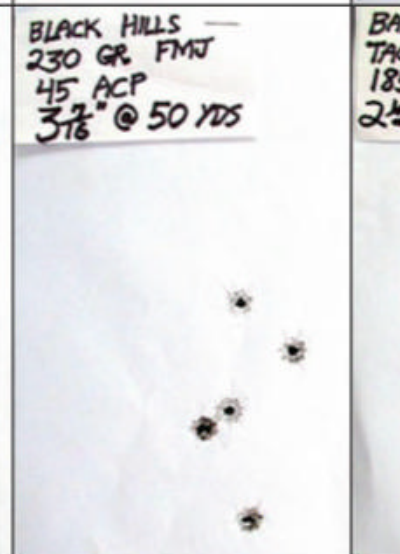

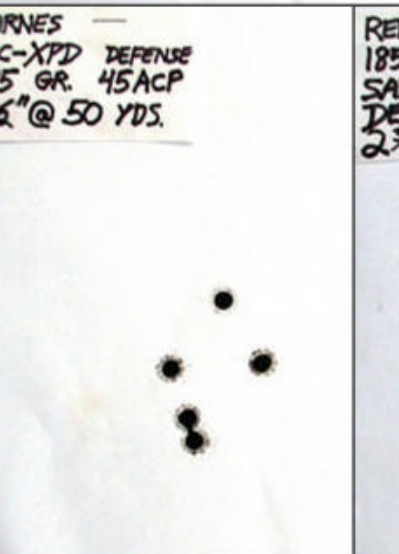

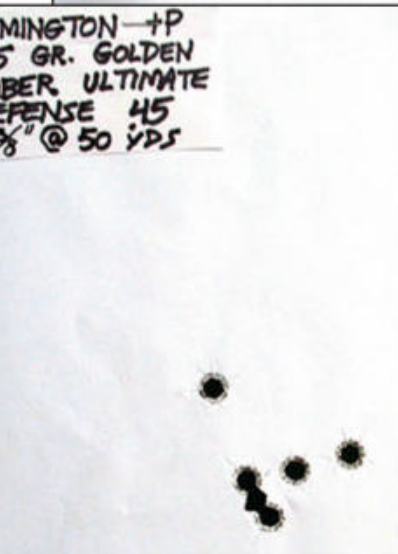

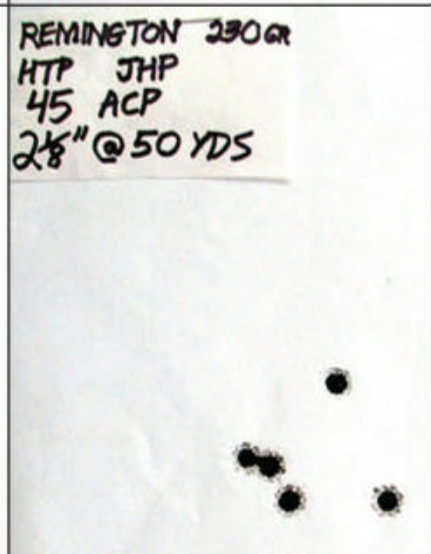

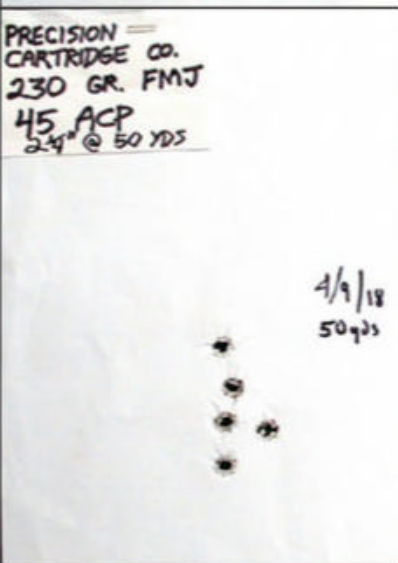

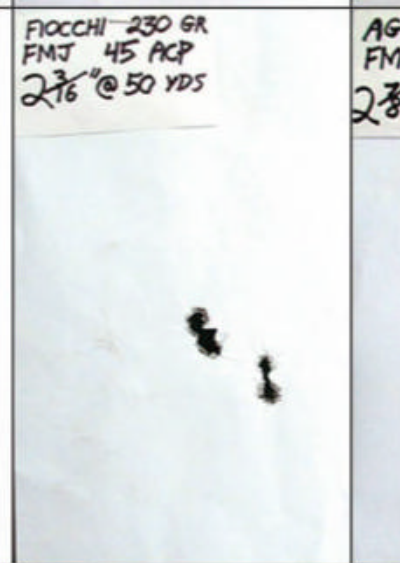

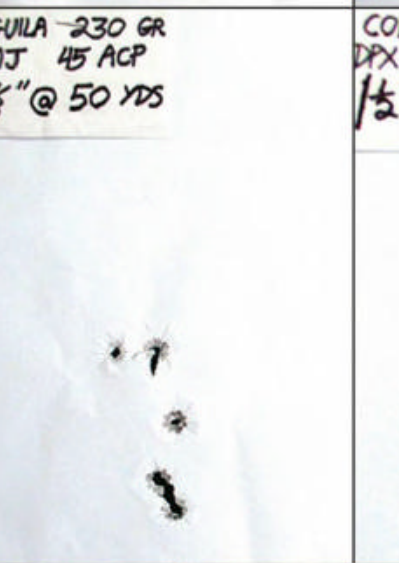

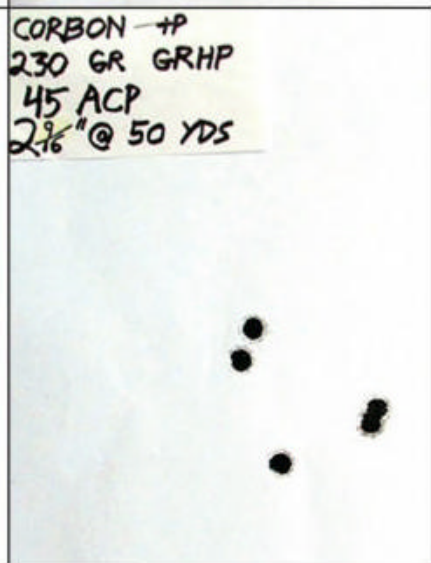

There are few parts and these are massive and solid. Today, I see too many gun designs with riveted, pressed, or welded together parts. These parts are not only not as strong they are places for rust to start. This is an all steel pistol except for the grips and unlike some guns I have seen the M1911 can be fired without the grips on. Today, polymer framed pistols are popular yet the chemists know that even in the best conditions these plastics will begin to deteriorate in 50 years. In sunlight, it is much faster. Incidentally, the polymer used in modern pistols can be similar as the polymer in your cracked car dash. Don't think that all of those guns are going to last as family heirlooms. Being plastic, these parts can be vulnerable to solvents. Some cleaner/degreasers will leave them tacky and even melt them if the plastic is soaked in them as a policeman found out a few years ago. He was cleaning his Glock in the kitchen sink in a tin pie pan. After spraying half a can of a cleaner/degreaser on it he left it to soak like he would a steel pistol. Big mistake. When he came back and picked up the gun his fingers sank right into the frame on the side that was down in the solvent. The gun was ruined. Aluminum is another popular gun material but I cannot forget the fact that every Japanese Zero still flying today has had its wing spars replaced at enormous cost because the aluminum they used crystallized over time. I'll stick with steel.

The M1911 barrel tips down for the optimum angle for feeding the cartridge after unlocking instead of making the cartridge find its own way to the chamber. The barrel bushing functions in the worst conditions and tends to force dirt out as it operates. Like most pistols of the turn of the 20th century the M1911 was designed for long life. and firing 10,000 to 15,000 rounds through it without failures and with all parts still in good condition. The gun was then put back in with the rest and shipped out to the troops. By WWII some of the prominent new designs were designed for a service life of just 5000 rounds. That shorter life span trend has continued to this day. These pistols are like Mayflies, here today and dead tomorrow if you shoot as much as I like to.

The cartridge is also well designed. It has a straight case and any grit in the chamber is pushed ahead of the cartridge out into the barrel. It's low chamber pressure of 12,000 psi does not cause problems with rough or dirty chambers. The heavy 230-grain slug gives a massive operating impulse to the slide at low pressure for less wear and tear on the gun. In contrast to this the 9MM has a tapered case that has an uneven recoil because it's bullet is smaller than the base causing a secondary tendency to push the gun forward. The tapered case also jams dirt between the case and the chamber. It's 36,000 psi high pressure cartridge cannot function reliably with a rough or dirty chamber. If a 9MM bullet is forced back into its case the pressure can rise even further into the low 40,000 psi range which is beyond what most 9MM guns can safely take. Results may vary with the user.

In regard to stopping power, the .45 ACP is a great round. In WWII, the Army stated that it had more stopping power than the 30-06. The 9MM works well on civilized opponents that lie down and cry for a medic once they are perforated but doesn't work quick enough to stop a determined adversary as the mercenaries in the Congo quickly learned to their chagrin. The Browning High Power with its high capacity 9MM magazine proved lacking at stopping an enraged panga machete-wielding native before he got to you but the .45 ACP and the venerable .455 Webley got the job done with one shot to the vitals. These guns were soon fetching outrageous prices as a result.

It's important to note that this was done with FMJ ammo. The .45 doesn't need expanding bullets to stop the enemy and you do need the extra penetration of FMJ ammo in combat where the enemy is always trying to take cover. In WWII, the superior effectiveness of the 30-06 AP ammo led to calls for it being standardized but the increased cost of its bullets trumped the value of the soldier's lives and the M2 ball remained standard.

Today a lot of people put too much faith in expanding bullets. They don't always expand though. Just take a look at the photo of the state of the art segmented expanding hollow point dug from my backstop without a hint of expansion. If it didn't expand in that sand and dirt it certainly would not in flesh. Now think about what would happen if you were using a smaller caliber and depending on bullet expansion for some semblance of stopping power and this happened right when you need it most. Not a very pretty picture at all. With a .45 FMJ you don't have to worry about such things as you already have all the stopping power you need plus the penetration on cover hollow points lack.

Part of the popularity of the M1911A1 is that it is the perfect size for its cartridge. Any smaller and it loses rapid-fire capability. Any bigger and it becomes unwieldy and hard to conceal. Back when it was invented this was the way pistols were supposed to be. Just look at the Colt SAA

The author's friend hitting a 3-inch natural "target" at 50 and 75 yards. He was able to consistently hit it at this range with the Inland 1911A1 pistol. Range was measured with a Bushnell Trophy Xtreme laser rangefinder.

Quality can be seen in every part of the Inland.

and the Luger. Svelt designs without an ounce of unnecessary metal. Now look at the ponderous designs of the 21st Century. The early guns look like elegant ballerinas while the later ones just look obese.

The M1911A1 is a good pointing, low recoil, easy to hit with pistol. The single action design is always the easiest to hit with and with an automatic you don't have to cock it for each shot like you do with a Colt SAA. I always remember my Betty shooting every coin out of the air that I threw up with a M1911A1. Even my old friend Elmer Kieth thought that she should stick with a .45 automatic for grizzly bears when we were trapping in Alaska instead of getting a .44 magnum because of her skill level with the .45. By the way, NEVER use anything but FMJ ammo on big game with the .45ACP as you need the penetration. You already have a big enough hole.

Elmer is remembered today as the Father of the .44 magnum but it should be remembered that he said the M1911A1 was the best pistol for military use. He once demonstrated its accuracy at 200 yards on a fallen log for a bunch of army officers who thought that you could not hit at long range with it. After riddling the log, he invited anyone who still thought the .45 was inaccurate at long range to go lie down by that log and let him shoot at them. There were no takers.

Unlike many guns the M1911 is extremely easy to field strip and even detail strip. Reassembly is equally easy and straightforward with no fancy tricks to learn. I cannot stress enough how important that is. You never need a gunsmith to change parts on this gun.

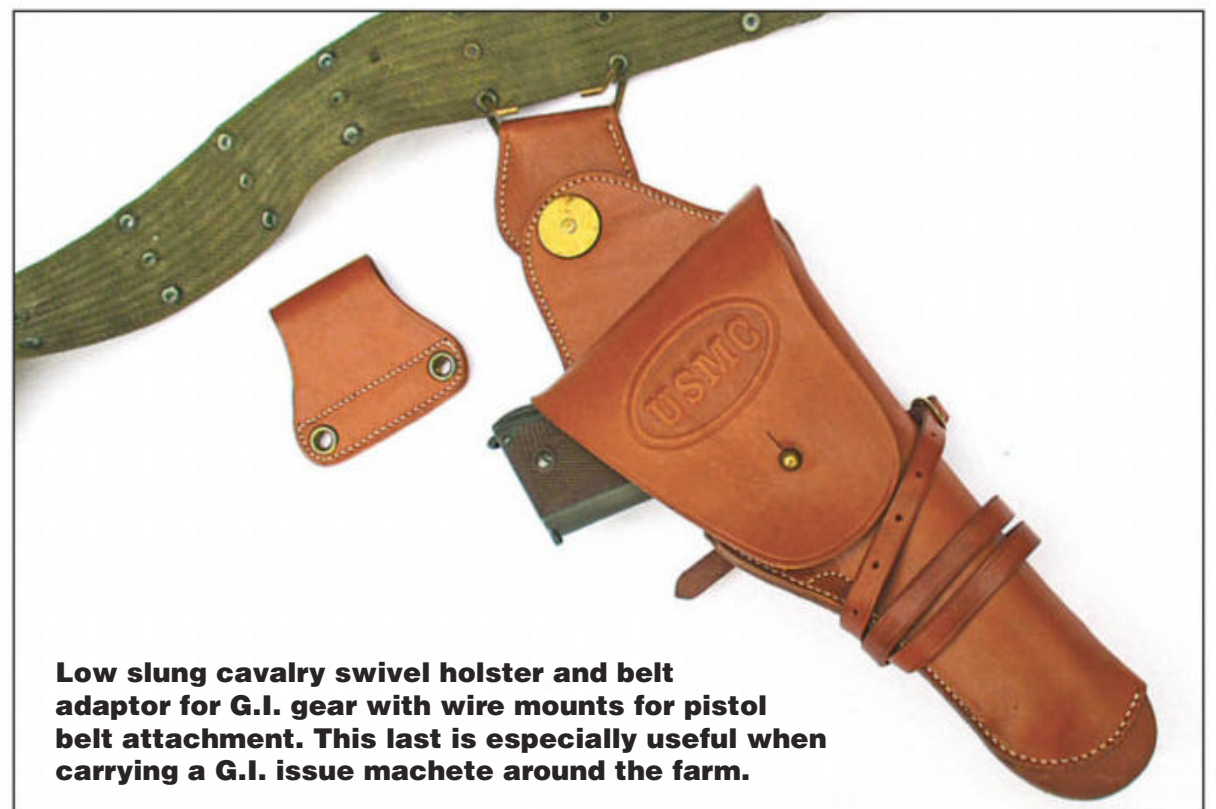

Ease of carrying is another factor. For a combat holster, nothing works better than the M1916 U.S. Army holster. I find the leather boot laces used for tie-down thongs break too fast so I substitute the nylon laces from old paratrooper boots and just loop it twice around the leg before tying. The M1916 holster was designed with all the best gunfighter features. It is as fast as a holster can be made. Just flip the flap up with your thumb and start rolling your fingers around the grip as you draw it beginning with the little finger. It can be carried cocked and locked where you wipe the safety off before the gun comes on target or carried cocked with just the grip safety which John Browning thought was all the gun needed. Both El Paso Saddlery (EPSaddlery.com) and Pacific Canvas and Leather (PacificCanvasandLeather.com) make the Mil-Spec M1916 holster and Pacific Canvas and Leather also make the WWII G.I. canvas web belt and canvas magazine pouch to go with it. For those with a yen for the low-slung swivel cavalry holster version both firms make this as well. The choice depends upon your build. I am long waisted and the M1916 holster is the perfect fit for me. A short-waisted or long-armed man might prefer the lower hanging cavalry model. You just have to see which fits you best.

For concealed carry, nothing is better or more comfortable than the pancake holster design. I have worn one of the first ones made by the late Roy Baker since the early 1970's. How I kept it patched and repaired all those years is the subject of a separate article in the Firearms News. Roy Baker is no more but El Paso Saddlery makes a fine pancake holster they call their "Tortillia."

Some men find a shoulder holster desirable and this is especially true if you are driving a tank or a truck. El Paso makes the G.I. Tanker shoulder holster to Mil-Specs for them. Due to the way the strap is positioned, and the cut of the holster, this one works equally well with a Luger pistol. It's the only .45 holster that does by the way. An advantage of the G.I. Tanker holster over the spring clamp shoulder holsters is that the gun won't bounce out if you have to jump over something.

When hunting, a holster on your strong side gets in the way of the rifle or shotgun you are carrying so a crossdraw holster is a necessity. El Paso Saddlery's #2 Thumbbreak fills the bill here. Be sure to specify the crossdraw version as it comes both ways.

None of the holsters that I recommend are the tight molded variety that can seize the gun if you make a

COMPETITION HANDGUNS AT THE 2019 SHOT SHOW

By James Tarr

America is the greatest country in the history of the world, and for one week a year the SHOT Show is the greatest place in America, at least if you're a firearms fan. The fact that it is held in Las Vegas is simply an added bonus. As I am Firearms News' dedicated "competition" guy, I was tasked with tracking down any new competition handguns introduced at this year's show.

Twenty years ago, no factories cared about making guns to suit the needs of competition shooters, and as a result guys like me helped put the children of 1911 gunsmiths through college. Things, however, have changed.

Over the past decade most gun manufacturers have embraced competition shooters, and now offer at least one model specifically intended for competition — by which I mean action pistol competition — USPSA/

IPSC, IDPA, Steel Challenge, etc. What I specifically noticed was that the tweaks done to handguns, originally inspired by competition shooters, are becoming so widespread that many of the new guns being introduced, which aren't actually marketed as competition handguns, are nevertheless pretty darn ideal for the action pistol sports right out of the box. Heck, thanks to competition none other than the vaunted FBI has realized the value of a magazine well, and demanded it on their new duty guns — and Glock has obliged!

The SHOT Show is roughly the size of Las Vegas itself, so don't expect this to be a complete list, but rather just a rundown of some of the highlights:

Nighthawk

Personally, I think the term "competition revolver" is a bit of an oxymoron, sort of like jumbo shrimp or efficient government, but plenty of people are happy to disagree. Ruger saw a lot of success with their GP100 Match Champion introduced a few years ago,

SHOT Show is just one big gun party, and perhaps the hottest pistol at the show was the new STI/TTI Combat Master as featured in the new movie John Wick 3. Everyone wanted to get their photo taken with the gun as well as with Taran Butler, the man behind TTI and who is famous for the live-fire training he's given Keanu Reeves. From left: Laurence Gurule of TTI, Tony Pignato of STI, Taran Butler, Sam Yu (a TTI-sponsored shooter, holding the pistol), and Louie Yu.

The new Firehawk from Nighthawk Custom, which is an old-school compensated .45. It is offered in stainless steel (as seen here) or black nitride, and with the compensator is about as long as a standard Government Model — but much, much cooler (and much more expensive).

A tricked out colorized version of the Korth Super Sport .357 Magnum revolver from Nighthawk Custom. This is a purpose-built competition revolver with fully adjustable sights and a fabulous trigger.

The “standard” Korth Super Sport as seen here isn’t so standard, and in addition to fully adjustable sights you’ve got an oversize cylinder release and rail on both sides of the barrel shroud, in case you wanted to mount a stop for shooting from barricades.

but this past year the tricked-out wheelguns to go see are the Korth models put out by Nighthawk Custom (NighthawkCustom.com).

Nighthawk had two fabulous whiz-bang versions of the Korth Super Sport dedicated competition .357 magnum competition revolver on hand, as well as a custom version of the shorter Mongoose .357.

I think the purpose of these three wheelguns was to remind showgoers just how much of a custom shop Nighthawk is, because while one of the Super Sports was factory stock (which means it sported all sorts of cool features), the other two had unique features. The second Super Sport had custom anodizing, and the Mongoose had custom wood grips, custom adjustable front sight, and a ventilated barrel shroud.

And the trigger pulls on these revolvers.....mmmmm, good. But they had better be for the price — the Mongoose starts at $3,499, and the Super Sport at $4,799.

Let’s not forget the 1911s. Nighthawk made their bones building custom 1911s. While current competition 1911s tend toward high-cap models, “single stack” division is very popular, and most of Nighthawk’s offerings would be highly suitable for it, especially when chambered in 9mm, which seems to be the rising preference.

One new 1911 model from Nighthawk is the Firehawk, which is them making old-school new again. The Firehawk is a single-stack “Carry Comp” 1911 that sports a single port compensator at the end of a bull barrel, currently only chambered in .45 ACP. Before the action pistol sports moved to high-capacity .38 Supers it was 1911s like the Firehawk that were winning titles.

A custom ventilated barrel shroud version of the Korth Mongoose .357. It also has custom wood grips and a fully adjustable front sight.

My better half and I attended a live-fire event put on by Nighthawk and Agency Arms, and we got to put some rounds downrange before the helicopter with mini-gun showed up and started setting off Tannerite (cuz ‘Merica!). That Firehawk was one of the softest shooting .45s I’ve ever had the pleasure to fire. Because of its compensator the Firehawk would only be legal to compete in USPSA’s Open (racegun) Division, where you’d be handicapped by your limited capacity, but you’d sure earn retro style points. Offered in black nitride finish or stainless steel, prices for the Firehawk start at (brace yourself) $4,199.

CZ/CZ Custom

Technically the CZ Custom shop in Mesa Arizona, run by professional shooter Angus Hobdell, is its own independent entity, but the truth is CZC works side by side with the folks at CZ USA all the time. In fact, many of the prototypes that come out of the custom shop end up as production factory guns, like the recent Scorpion Micro. If it wasn’t for Angus and his shop’s unrelenting pressure on the marketplace the CZ-75 would not be the dominant pistol in USPSA’s Production division.

The AO1 originally started out as a custom prototype from CZ Custom in Arizona — seen here are the original workups in both full size and compact. The AO1-LD (full size with long dust cover) is now available from CZ USA as a factory model.

The AO1-LD was the brainchild of CZ Custom in Mesa Arizona, and it will be now be offered as a factory model from CZ USA. It is a full size 9mm, 100% made in the USA, and takes 19-round P-09 magazines.

The latest pistol out of CZ is the AO1-LD (long dust cover). This purpose-built competition gun first showed up as a CZ Custom prototype about a year ago, but now it is a CZ USA factory model (although CZ Custom still has an exclusive on selling the AO1-SD — short dust cover). Designed to be the evolution of the very successful CZ 75 Shadow series, the AO1-LD pistol is 100% made in the USA. It has a 4.9-inch, match-grade, 416-stainless bull barrel and comes standard with a blued frame that's been hammer-forged and CNC-machined. Trigger pull is roughly seven pounds double action, 3.5 pounds single action.

The frame has a deep beavertail grip tang, undercut trigger guard, raised 25-LPI checkering, and an integral magwell. You can tell this pistol is meant for competition by the massive dust cover, which keeps muzzle rise to a minimum. The pistol comes with two 19-round P-09 magazines, and has a suggested retail of $2,259.

Walther Q5 Match SF

Walther has done a huge company-wide giant dog-and-pony show publicity push on their new SF, which I find interesting as it a dedicated competition gun.

Basically, a steel-framed version of their polymer competition-oriented Q5 Match, the new Walther Q5 Match SF features an extended full-length frame rail which adds weight just where it will do the most good, a beavertail at the back of the frame to eliminate the chances of getting bit by the slide, checkering on the front strap and the front of the trigger guard, wrap-around textured polymer grips, and (on the Pro model) a sizable magazine well.

The front sight has a red fiber optic insert. The rear sight is fully adjustable, and mounted on a removable plate. Walther provides just about every mounting plate you might need to attach your choice of mini red dot to the slide if you desire. Each pistol is supplied with three magazines. And, of course, the Q5 SF features the same excellent Quick Defense Trigger pull found on all Walther PPQs, which they advertise at 5.6 pounds but is usually lighter.

I put some serious rounds downrange through these pistols at a super-secret media rollout about a month before the SHOT Show in Tulsa. They are very soft shooting and accurate, with great triggers.

The SF will be available in two models, the Standard and the Pro. The Pro model comes complete with a large extended aluminum magazine well and three 17-round magazines. These magazines are the standard Walther PPQ 15-round magazines wearing +2 extended basepads so they can be easily seated into the large magazine well. This model weighs 42 ounces. The Standard model does away with the magazine well and is supplied with three flush PPQ 15-round magazines and weighs 41 ounces. The MSRP of the Standard model is $1400, and the Pro model is an additional $100.

STI

STI made their bones making wide-bodied high-capacity 1911s intended for the action pistol sports (the “2011”), then expanded to offer CCW-sized guns as well. STI still has a huge catalog of competition pistols,

The big news from Walther was a new model of their dedicated competition pistol, the Q5 Match. The new pistol is the Q5 Match SF for steel frame, and it is a sharp-looking soft shooting pistol. Here Tarr holds it while filming the exclusive first look video for our sister publication Guns & Ammo.

Walther first showed off the Q5 Match SF to writers in Tulsa Oklahoma about a month before it was shown off at SHOT, and everybody liked it. Here USPSA's Front Sight Magazine editor Jake Martens runs it through a USPSA-style stage.

The New STI/TTI 2011 Combat Master as seen in the new movie John Wick 3. This is actually one of the guns used in the movie (check out how dirty that barrel hood is, it started out gold!), loaned to the STI booth by Gary Tuers with Xtreme Props and Weapons in California.

but the new model receiving 99% of the attention at the booth was John Wick's new gun — the STI/TTI 2011.

John Wick 3 is opening March 17, and in the movie the titular retired assassin who really doesn't like people messing with his dog or his car is running a new handgun. In John Wick 2 Keanu Reeves used a Glock 34 with a Combat Master custom package from TTI (Taran Tactical Innovations.com), and in John Wick 3 he uses a polymer-framed STI wide-body with the same Combat Master treatment. Not only is it an awesome movie tie-in, this pistol is perfectly suited for competition.

You'll note unique texturing on the grip, an extended magwell with tactical cutouts for stripping out recalcitrant mags, special slide cuts, and a fully adjustable rear sight paired with a green insert fiber optic front, among other features. This gun will only be available from TTI, and comes with four magazines with TTI basepads. Currently it's only offered in 9mm, and the magazines hold 23 rounds — so don't expect Mr. Wick to have to do a lot of reloads. This pistol has a suggested retail of $3,899 and is simply beautiful. Look for a full review of it in detail in a future issue of Firearms News.

Ed Brown Products

Like Nighthawk Custom, Ed Brown Products is known as a custom 1911 shop. The Ed Brown beavertail safety for the 1911 is still the standard against which all others are judged (it gets the hand higher up on the gun than any other factory grip safety).

Like Nighthawk Custom Ed Brown continues to put out a lot of fabulous custom 1911s that would be more than suitable for use in IDPA or USPSA divisions friendly to single stacks, but they don't necessarily make "competition" pistols.

The product that first caught my eye at the Ed Brown booth wasn't a 1911 per se, but rather their .22 LR conversion kit for the 1911. There are a lot of gun games meant for rimfire, or with specific rimfire divisions, and the Ed Brown conversion kit atop your 1911 would make you very competitive.

The top end conversion kit includes a slide with a Mil Std 1913 "picatinny" rail all along the top with a Bo-Mar style fully adjustable rear sight and post front. They also offer a very nice compensator to go along with this top end, to reduce recoil to just about Another new product from Ed Brown that would be just as useful for those “tactically” minded as competition shooters is their new Orion, a collaboration between Ed Brown Products and ZEV Technologies. This is a high-end 9mm 1911 with familiar-looking ZEV cutouts on the slide. Ed Brown offers several variations including a model with a slide-mounted red dot and extended threaded barrel, but I really liked the iron-sighted model in stainless. It features an integral carry mag well that doesn’t extend past the frame and is gorgeous as well as functional.

Beretta LTT

In these pages, I recently wrote up the 92 Elite LTT, which is considered by many people to be a dedicated competition pistol, designed for Beretta by national champion competitive shooter Ernest Langdon. This pistol is out new this year, and Beretta had a few on display under glass in their SHOT Show booth, as if they were priceless jewelry.

As Langdon told me, “The 92 Elite LTT is not a competition gun per se. Rather it has been designed to turn the 92 into the most shootable platform possible. If that makes it ideal for competition, so be it."

They also offer a very nice compensator to go along with this top end, to reduce recoil to just about zero. Suggested retail for the conversion top end is $495, and the compensator is an additional $60.

While it was introduced earlier in the year, the 92 Elite LTT from Beretta was officially debuted at the SHOT Show. This iteration of the Model 92, designed by competition shooter Ernest Langdon, is designed to max out the platform for competition or carry.

Tarr got his hands on an LTT earlier in the year and shot it at several USPSA matches. He liked it a lot, and didn't experience any jams in over 800 rounds fired.

The Beretta 92 Elite LTT features a 4.7-inch stainless steel barrel, LTT sights, ultra-thin G10 grips, a beveled mag well opening, extended magazine release, forward cocking serrations, and a 'D'-model hammer spring to reduce the trigger pull a bit. Suggested retail on the LTT is $1,100, and that price includes three 15-round magazines. I bought my test gun, and have been carrying it on my hip for the last four months, which should tell you how I feel about it.

Glock

While they have been pushing hard in the CCW/duty arena with their 43/43X/48 and Gen5 guns, Glock (US.Glock.com) isn't getting the same amount of attention for what they're doing with their niche competition guns — mainly making them. For a while you just couldn't find Glock 17Ls, and there was word that the 24 was discontinued. Now, not only are both of them displayed on the Glock website once again, you can actually find them for sale.

If you're not familiar with these models, let me give you a rundown. The uncommon Glock 17L is a longslide 9mm, and the even rarer G24 is a longslide .40

S&W that looks identical to the 17L but actually is a little beefier to handle the increased pressure/recoil of the .40 S&W cartridge.

Both guns feature 6.02-inch barrels and are built on Glock's Gen3 frames. The 9mm 17L weighs in at 26.63 ounces, whereas the .40 S&W model 24 adds an even 3 ounces to that for a total weight of 29.63 ounces. Pro shooters such as Bob Vogel have successfully competed against tricked-out high-cap 1911s using the G24 at major USPSA matches.

In addition to the above two uncommon pistols, Glock is still selling the snot out of their two more popular competition models, the G34 (9mm) and G35 (.40 S&W). These guns feature the same full-size frames, but with 5.31-inch barrels and cutouts on the slides to keep them the same weight as the original duty-length G17/G22 guns.

Custom Non-Glocks

I'm not even listing a company name here, because apparently there are now seven gazillion (yes, that's a real word, look it up, seriously) companies doing custom work on Glock frames and slides or offering their own custom Glock-pattern frames and slides. Lone Wolf Distributors was one of the first companies to offer a frame alternative with their Timberwolf, and custom contoured slides, but now you can find custom Glock slides everywhere, from small custom shops to giant retailers like Brownells. AIM Surplus (it wasn't exhibiting at SHOT but I ran into CEO Bryan Flanagan at the HK booth) is the latest company to offer their own textured Glock-pattern slides.

These Non-Glocks (writing that makes me think of the band 4 Non Blondes) aren't specifically marketed as competition guns. Neither are they marketed as tactical guns. The beauty of the Glock design is that it's suitable for both, usually with the same minor alterations (better than factory sights and trigger are a must, and frame texturing is a good idea).

TTI got a huge amount of attention two years ago when they introduced the Combat Master package for Glocks...in part because that's what John Wick used in Italy in the second movie. The non-Glock getting the most attention at SHOT might have been ZEV Technologies' OZ9, which is being sold as a complete firearm.

The ZEV OZ9 has a 1911-style grip angle, and while I like the Glock grip angle, a lot of people don't, and it's the #1 thing keeping some people away from the design. The OZ9 has a larger steel receiver running the length of the polymer frame, and that receiver has the serial number, which means you'll be able to swap out your grip module without having to buy a new "gun". This pistol offers every kind of "aftermarket upgrade" you could possibly want in a non-Glock direct from the factory and standard, including a slide cut to accept red dots.

Aftermarket slides with more aggressive serrations are not allowed in USPSA's Production Division, which is meant for guns more (or less) factory stock. However, the OZ9 as it comes from the factory looks like you see here, which means as soon as they've sold enough units to qualify it should be legal for Production (if you take off the magwell) or Carry Optics Division. MSRP is $1,679, which is actually less than what you'd spend customizing your factory Glock to get it to this level.

Bits And Pieces

There is just so much to see at the SHOT Show that fitting it all into one article is a non-starter, but here are a few other things that might be of interest

SIG is bringing back their custom pistol shop. I talked to Tim Butler, who is the new head of the shop

The Taran Tactical Combat Master/John Wick package on the Glock 34 (top) was huge news two years ago. The G34 is a dedicated competition gun that TTI maxes out. The news this year is that the uncommon longslide competition models 17L (bottom) and 24 are actually in production and available from Glock, after rumors they were going to be discontinued.

The market is filling up with what Tarr is calling “non-Glocks”, Glock-pattern guns not actually made by the Austrian G-word. The one getting the most attention at the show was the OZ9 from ZEV Technologies. This is a completely new gun with a 1911 grip angle and a full-length steel frame inside the grip module. It accepts red dots on the slide and comes with a magazine well.

Much like a SIG P320, the grip on the ZEV OZ9 isn't the serialized part. The serial number is on the steel frame which runs the length of the gun and provides much more surface area for the slide. The steel frame, which holds the trigger components, comes out of the grip module simply by removing one pin.

(transferred over from the production pistol side) and we had a nice conversation about the new gun he was making for actor Joe Mantegna, who I'd seen walking around the show (without an entourage or a body-guard, I'd like to point out).

Right now, it looks like SIG's custom shop is mostly going to be doing engraving and custom color work, as opposed to doing gunsmithing, but anyone paying attention to SIG's P320 products will have seen how aggressively they have gone after the competitive shooting market. Part of that is due Phil Strader being one of the head pistol guys there — among other things, Phil is a former pro shooter and President of the United States Practical Shooting Association (USPSA).

Small companies which came to prominence through their work customizing Glocks used to be ignored, but now they've gone mainstream. Not only did ZEV Technologies get a lot of press for their new OZ9 mentioned above, but Agency Arms, another heavy hitter in the non-Glock gun business, has teamed with Nighthawk custom on several 1911 designs in addition to putting out their own custom Glock-pattern pistols.

Red dots on pistols are getting so popular, you should just assume that any mid- to full-size pistol put out by a manufacturer is offered in a model that accepts a slide-mounted mini red dot. Carry Optics division in USPSA is getting very popular.

Currently, USPSA's Production Division is dominated by CZ 75-pattern guns, but that doesn't mean they're all CZ guns. Tangfolio pistols (EAACorp.com) are chosen by a lot of competitors, and EAA has a huge number of models suitable for competition (including the Witness and Witness Elite models).

The news from EAA this year isn't a CZ 75 clone, it was their introduction of a new striker-fired pistol, the MC 28 SA. This is a full-size pistol with a 4.25" barrel, chambered in 9mm, with a magazine capacity of 15. Manufactured by Girsan in Turkey, this isn't specifically marketed as a competition pistol, but with an MSRP under $400 I know lots of budget-minded competitive shooters will be interested to try it out.

James Tarr is a longtime contributor to Firearms News and other firearms publications. He is also the author of several books, including CARNIVORE, which was featured on The O'Reilly Factor. His brand-new novel, "Waiting for the Kick," is available now through Amazon and Barnes & Noble. FN

The MC 28 SA is a full-size striker-fired gun made by Girsan in Turkey, imported by EAA. Its low price (under $400 for every model) will be attractive to budget-minded shooters.

EAA is well known to competition shooters for selling all sorts of Tangfolio CZ 75-pattern guns intended for action pistol competition. They didn't have any new models on display, but they showed off seemingly all of the models they do offer, including this Open-division race gun, a Witness Gold Custom Xtreme by Tangfolio.

Shadow Systems' SS9F is the Glock 17 platform tricked out in a fully configurable custom platform. This model sports the interesting LFT slide profile with grip tape inserts making a very shootable gun even more user friendly.

THE SHADOW SYSTEMS SS9F CUSTOM GLOCK PUSHING IT TO THE EDGE

By James Tarr

If you were to gather together a group of gunwriters (which I will tell you is about as easy as herding the proverbial cats, unless free alcohol is offered) and ask them to name all of the companies which make 1911s, they could name most if not all of those manufacturers. If you asked them to name all the companies which made AR-15s, none could name them all, because there are so many.

In addition, no group of gunwriters would be able to name all of the companies which produce custom versions of Glock pistols. Not because there are so many, but because most of them are small companies without big advertising budgets, and they're growing their market one customer at a time, often through posts on Instagram or AR15.com. The technical term for this is guerrilla marketing.

The Same, But Different

Shadow Systems ShadowSystemsCorp.com is one of those small companies producing customized Glock pistols. I'd never heard of them until my editor brought them to my attention, and once I started perusing their website I can say some of their ideas on slide contouring definitely intrigued me.

Shadow Systems is far from the first or only company to offer custom packages on Glocks that include slide cuts. Taran Tactical Innovations (TTI), ZEV Custom, Salient Arms, Agency Arms, and Lone Wolf Distributing are just some of the companies I can name off the top of my head doing the same thing.

Except they're not the same. Every company does things a little bit different, and those in the know can usually tell which company did the work on a gun simply by the pattern of slide cuts. The pistols from Shadow Systems are no different — they offer some slide work the like of which I haven't seen anywhere else. That is very attractive in addition to being functional. In fact, some of their ideas are so common-sense smart I'm shocked no one else is doing them.

For this article, I secured one of their SS9F pistols with their LFT Hybrid Grip slide. Shadow Systems' nomenclature is pretty easy to figure out — the SS9F is the Shadow Systems 9mm Full Size (Glock 17) pistol. They also offer the Glock 19-size SS9C (Compact). Both platforms are offered with standard or extended threaded barrels. Actually, as they are a custom shop, both their models are fully configurable to meet the customer's wants and/or needs.

The base gun for the Shadow Systems SS9F is a Gen 3 Glock 17 and it is supplied with two Magpul 17-round magazines. Actually, that choice of magazines is the only thing that had me scratching my head about this otherwise excellent pistol — Glocks come from the factory with several Glock magazines, after all.

As I repeatedly tell my children there are no stupid questions, only stupid people, so I reached out to Chad Jewett at Shadow Systems about their choice of mags with the gun. He explained that they want these pistols to be as American-made as possible, which is why they use Magpul magazines — that and they’re very happy with the performance of these magazines as well. Just about every part on the Shadow Systems pistols except the Glock frame are made in the U.S....and Glock has started making many versions of their pistols in the U.S. as well, so don’t be surprised if you see a wholly made-in-the-USA SS9F or SS9C.

It Goes To Eleven

Shadow Systems’ Glocks are meant to be fighting/tactical pistols pushed to the boundaries of the envelope, so the first thing you’ll see on the SS9F if you start from the top is the AmeriGlo night sight at the front of

The LFT slide features panels designed for pre-cut grip tape sections, and has directional serrations — smooth going toward the muzzle, but with sharp edges when you need to rack the slide. The AmeriGlo front sight is an excellent choice.

the slide, the tritium insert inside a large orange circle. The rear sight is plain black and serrated, which tells me that there are people at Shadow Systems who actually know stuff. To repeat, as I have said before:

The rear sight is a window frame. You look through it, not at it, so any dots or colors or whatever you put on the rear sight tends to draw your eye away from the front sight, which is the exact opposite of what you want. The front sight is what you focus on to get your hits.

As America is the land of options, and many shooters have different preferences, these aren’t the only sight choices offered by Shadow Systems. You have your choice of a green outline tritium front sight, plain black front sight, or a front sight with a red fiber optic insert. The slide is also cut at the rear to accept a Trijicon RMR, as red dot-sighted pistols are the current hot new fad, but I will circle back around to that.

The barrel in the SS9F is a match unit constructed of 416R stainless steel. As a “match” barrel it has a slightly tighter fit than a standard factory Glock barrel, but you don’t want it too tight — the magic of the Glock design (same as with the AK-47) is that the

The match stainless steel barrel is fluted and coated with bronze Titanium Carbo-Nitride. Shadow Systems’ uses a standard factory recoil spring system.

The LFT slide is supplied with three pairs of pre-cut grip tape inserts. One rough and one medium grit gray (black) inserts, and one medium grit pink.

The match barrel and slide are both stainless steel and made in the US. An available upgrade for the SS9F is their Elite Trigger, a flat-faced aluminum piece. The trigger assembly includes a 3.5" connector to bring the trigger pull down to an acceptable weight.

loose tolerances allow the gun to run in all environmental conditions. Even “inaccurate” pistols are usually more accurate than the shooters using them, and to be honest the thing which affects a pistol’s practical accuracy the most isn’t actually how inherently mechanically accurate it is but the quality and weight of the trigger pull. The SS9F (thank goodness) doesn’t have a Glock factory trigger pull, and we’ll get to that in a second.

The barrel is fluted, and you’ll notice it is a fancy color — that is Shadow Systems’ bronze Titanium Carbo-Nitride (TiCN) which is harder than conventional titanium nitride (TiN) and has a lower coefficient of friction. Both TiCN and TiN offer excellent corrosion and wear resistance. Shadow Systems offers barrels with a standard titanium nitride finish, which looks gold, as well as black DLC (diamond-like carbon). The barrels all have traditional lands and grooves so they’re safe to shoot lead and/or coated bullets through, unlike the factory polygonally-rifled barrels.

Show Me On The Pistol Where To Touch You

It is the slide texturing that really caught my eye with the SS9F. Originally it was the cutout at the front to accept grip tape that drew my attention, but once I got my hand on a pistol that wasn’t the only thing that impressed me.

The slide features Shadow Systems’ LFT Hybrid Grip texturing. LFT is Lead Faucet Tactical — specifically Dan Brokos of LFT. Brokos spent 25 years in U.S. Army Special Forces, including being in charge of Range 37 at Fort Bragg. The slide on this pistol was designed by Shadow Systems in partnership with Dan Brokos.

The first thing that will catch your eye on the slide is the rectangular inset panel on the front designed to accept pre-cut grip tape inserts. This cutout is part of, but not the whole story, but please allow me to briefly rant about Glocks in general and their slides in particular before I delve into the details of this slide texturing, and why you both want and need it.

A quick story about how people who know what the hell they’re doing understand where the Glock design is lacking:

Shadow Systems wants these pistols to be as American-made as possible, which is why they are supplied with two “Made in the USA” Magpul magazines.

It was over ten years ago when I was picking up my first Glock from my gunsmith Doug Jones (Acc-U-Rail.com). I carried that Glock 34 every day, and also shot it avidly at USPSA matches, competing in Production Division. In Production Division, you’re only allowed to do a minimal amount of work to the pistols, as the division is supposed to favor factory stock-type guns.

Doug had done a trigger job on my Glock, and while I was there picking it up I noticed another Glock sitting there. Doug had machined some very aggressive forward cocking serrations on the front of the slide, something I’d seen in magazines before but never in person.

Glocks really need forward cocking serrations, the factory slides are just too slick and even the rear factory serrations aren’t aggressive enough, but as I told Doug as I looked down at the other gun longingly, “I can’t get that done on my gun and still be legal for Production Division.

Doug told me, “They don’t care about that when you’re just using them to shoot people.” Which is both funny and true.

Turns out the other pistol belonged to one of Doug’s oldest customers, Jerry Barnhart. Many of you readers might not know who Jerry “The Burner” Barnhart is. Holder of multiple national and world-

This SS9F featured their optional Premium Package, includes grip texturing (in this case their Enhanced Traction texturing), texturing forward on the frame for your thumbs, a slight reduction of the grip angle/backstrap, a double undercut trigger guard with texturing on the bottom, and a scallop around the magazine release.

champion titles in USPSA and IPSC, for about a decade every major action pistol match was won either by Rob Leatham, Todd Jarrett, or Jerry Barnhart. Jerry was so fast he is said to have disproved the “you can’t miss fast enough to win” dictum, and he needed stronger trigger return springs in his competition 1911s because he could work the trigger faster than the slide could cycle (which is .08 second on a 1911 in case you’re wondering). Not kidding.

Jerry is a serious guy and had a good side business training serious elite soldier types in high-speed gun-handling and shooting skills. Then 9/11 happened. Jerry dropped out of competition to spend 250 days a year traipsing around the world training the most elite of the elite ninja spec-ops trigger pullers, and he tended to work up his training drills/curriculum using guns similar to what the SF/Seals/etc. carried, which is where the customized Glock with forward slide serrations came in.

Which is a long way of saying that when your hands are slippery with blood and/or sweat, slick surfaces are not your friends, but you might not realize that until it happens. After twenty years Glock finally listened to their customers and started putting forward cocking serrations on their Gen 4 FS guns, but that’s the definition of “too little, too late”. “Glock Perfection”? Not by a long shot, pal.

If you're planning on running iron sights you can buy an RMR cut plate cover from Shadow Systems.

That rant wasn't so bad, was it? Now back to the texturing done on the Shadow Systems pistol. You can see for yourself in the pictures what it looks like, but what the photos don't really show is that the texturing cuts on the slide are directional.

Run your fingers down the slide from rear to front and the slide cuts are smooth bumps. Move your hand from front to rear on the Shadow's slide, the direction you would when actually working the slide, and you realize that every one of those bumps suddenly has a sharp edge. Exactly what you want and maybe need when trying to chamber/eject a round in the midst of what might euphemistically be called a dynamic environment.

And here comes the unique part of the SS9F's slide — the cutout for the grip tape inserts. Whether you're wearing gloves or not, gripping the sides or the corners of the slide, your fingers are going to grab onto something grippy, and you'll be able to work that slide no matter what.

The pistol is supplied with three pairs of pre-cut grip tape inserts. One rough and one medium grit gray (black) inserts, and one medium grit pink.

You might think the pink inserts are meant only for women, and are insulting and sexist. My better half likes pink and purple guns, and doesn't find them insulting to her womanhood or whatever. I also know several guys who run either pink guns or pink holsters in competition. As for tactical/carry uses...I would like to point out that bright pink is very visible in low light.

I have seen numerous tactical types who have put strips of grip tape on the forward sections of their Glock slides. The LFT slide is a better solution to this, for two reasons. 1. Unlike when putting grip tape on the outside of a standard slide, the edges of the grip tape panels on the LFT/Shadow Systems slide are protected and much less likely to start peeling. 2. Putting grip tape panels on the outside of a factory profile slide means that you will be grinding on your holster every time you draw and re-holster your pistol, as it widens the slide beyond the factory dimensions. Not by a lot, admittedly, but most polymer/Kydex holsters are form fit, and I can tell you that you both wear down your grip tape and the inside of your holster when slapping grip tape on a factory-profile slide. Not so with the Shadow Systems LFT slide, as the grip tape doesn't protrude past the edge of the slide, which is no wider than factory specs.

Oh, and I mentioned how Shadow Systems is doing all they can to put as much America into these pistols as possible, which means this isn't a factory Austrian-made slide that's been ground on, this is an American-made slide constructed of 17-4 steel. The slide has a DLC (diamond-like carbon) finish for the utmost in corrosion resistance, and unlike TiCN and TiN (and the poorly-thought-out factory finish Glock is currently putting on their pistols), DLC is not slick under the fingers. The matte finish of the DLC aids the shooter in gripping the slide.

Rough And Ready

The frame of the SS9F started out as a Gen 3 Glock factory frame. Shadow Systems then removed the finger grooves found on the Gen 3 and stippled the frame by hand. My pistol sports their more aggressive Enhanced Traction texturing, but they also offer traditional-style stippling.

The texturing is done over the entirety of the grip as well as on the frame just above the front of the trigger guard (on both sides), which is where your support-hand thumb will press when shooting the pistol with a proper two-hand hold.

Shadow Systems' Standard Package includes texturing of the grip and a relief cut underneath the trigger guard to get your hand just slightly higher on the grip. Their Premium Package, which you see on this pistol, includes grip texturing, texturing forward on the frame for your thumbs, a slight reduction of the grip angle/backstrap, a double undercut trigger guard with texturing on the bottom, and a scallop around the magazine release. This is a standard-length magazine release, but if you look close you'll see Shadow Systems chose an extended slide stop for this gun. Unlike the standard G17 slide stop, you can actually use the extended slide stop as a slide release.

A note on stippled grips and concealed carry: for well over a decade I have shot a lightly customized Glock in competition, while also carrying it all day every day. For years I avoided stippling the grip because I was worried that the stippling would wear through my clothing, as the hand-checkering on my custom 1911s did back when I worshipped at the altar of the 1911. Finally (after 30,000 rounds downrange and 100K+ dryfires) I replaced my original Glock 34 with a new improved TTI custom G34 with a stippled frame. After close to five years of carrying that gun I can report that the stippling will not wear through or ruin any of your clothing, perhaps because no matter how aggressive it is, the material is still polymer rather than metal? However, you will want a t-shirt or something between your skin and the grip. My G34 usually resides between a tucked-in T-shirt and (depending on the season) either a hooded sweatshirt or very stylish Hawaiian shirts that are the envy of my gunwriting peers. Just ask them.

While you can request a factory standard trigger pull, I don't know why you'd ever want to. The standard Glock factory trigger pull on a G17 or G19 is north of seven pounds, and as I mentioned the largest handicap to shooting a pistol fast and accurately (which is kinda what you'd want in a defensive situation, doncha think?) is a heavy trigger pull.

This pistol came supplied with Shadow Systems' Elite Trigger Assembly, which includes a 3.5# connector to bring the pull weight down and their Elite Trigger itself. Shadow's Elite Trigger is an aluminum piece, anodized flat black, with a nearly flat face that breaks right at 90 degrees. This trigger has a functioning safety lever in its face so the pistol remains just as drop-safe as a factory Glock while providing a much better trigger pull.

Shadow Systems advertises their Elite Trigger Assembly will provide a trigger pull between 4–4.5 pounds. The trigger pull on my sample weighed in at 4.75 pounds and was as crisp as a Glock trigger pull can get. Shadow Systems uses a full power striker spring in their guns, so light primer strikes are not an issue.

Shakespeare Called It A Sea Change

A brief time out for some sociocultural commentary: in the past 5–10 years Glocks have replaced 1911s in the holsters of serious gun carriers, or those who style themselves as such, or those who just want the latest and greatest gear.

There is a reason for this — Glocks are reliable. Period.

Memories are short, but I’d wager that most people today aren’t aware that most of the first custom work done to those GI 1911s starting way back in your grandpappy’s time weren’t to make them look cool but rather to make them reliable. Throating and polishing the chamber mouth, polishing and adjusting the feed ramp, lowering and flaring the ejection port, and tuning the extractor were all things done solely to get the gun to run reliably, specifically with JHPs. That is also why there are so many aftermarket manufacturers of 1911 magazines, because the GI pattern magazines worked pretty well with FMJ ammo, but that was about it.

Once gunsmiths figured out how to make 1911s reliable (mostly), all the work being done to them on the outside was to improve their handling and ergonomics — checkering the frontstrap and main-spring housing, installing a beavertail grip safety, undercutting the trigger guard, installing an extended thumb safety, etc.

Glocks, on the other hand, start out pretty much 100% reliable. So, all of the work that you’re seeing done to the design isn’t to make them more reliable but rather to make them more ergonomic and/or shootable. And not so boring to look at.

To be honest, Glocks run just fine out of the box, and the vast majority of people are not and will never be serious enough shooters to understand just how much the Glock factory sights and trigger pull suck, why they need better and more slide serrations, or be able to make the most out of the features on custom Glocks like the Shadow Systems guns. But everyone can appreciate the better-than-bland-factory appearance, and even if you’re not Delta Force or a USPSA GrandMaster it’s a nice feeling knowing the pistol you’re carrying is the best that it can possibly be. And looks as sharp as James Bond in a tux.

To Dot, Or Not To Dot, That Is The Question

And now we come to the slide cut for the Trijicon RMR mini red dot. Carry guns equipped with mini red dots are all the rage. These types of pistols, especially Glocks, are currently the James Bond of carry guns. And the idea of a red dot sight on any pistol, much less a carry gun, is cool. However, I think there are as many reasons to not put a red dot on your pistol as there are reasons to recommend it.

Pros:

- 1. A red dot is like a night sight in that it is visible in every lighting situation.
- 2. A red dot is simpler to use than iron sights.
- 3. For aging eyes that can’t get a front sight into focus, a red dot solves that problem.
- 4. For expert shooters trained up on them a red dot is faster to use than iron sights.
- 5. Most people can shoot slightly more accurately with a red dot than iron sights.
- 6. Red dots on pistols are cool.

Cons:

- 1. For just about everybody except expert shooters who have been using/training with them regularly, red dot sights have been proven to be slower at every realistic defensive handgun distance.
- 2. Red dots are electronic devices powered by batteries. Batteries die. Usually at the worst possible time. And electronics break. And they are held to the slide by screws, which tend to loosen.
- 3. The incremental (15%) increased accuracy provided by red dots over iron sights is irrelevant in a real world defensive situation, but the increased time required to use them is very definitely not.

Yes, some very high-speed guys use red dot-sighted pistols. The original “Roland Special” handgun, a Glock with a slide-mounted Trijicon RMR and a rail-mounted flashlight was originally worked up for an active duty Delta Force operator, which would make him a highly trained shooter with that gun...but I would bet he swapped out the batteries on that RMR regularly, if not before every mission, the same as he did the batteries in his EOTech, NVGs, IR laser, and weaponlight.

I know the average CCW holder. They don’t swap out the batteries on anything until they die. If then. They’re not going to swap out the batteries on their RMR until they notice the dot has ceased to be. Hopefully that isn’t during the middle of a carjacking or riot....

What is awesome about the SS9F is that it gives you the option of mounting an RMR on your slide. And it mounts directly to your slide, so you don’t have to worry about an extra piece (a mounting plate) coming loose. If you choose to just use iron sights, the pistol comes with a very nice machined aluminum cover plate with the Shadow Systems stylized “O” logo on it (for a little extra $$$).

Ranging Shots

If anyone ever says they’ve never seen a Glock malfunction, that just tells me that haven’t spent enough time at the range. I’ve seen every type of gun there is choke or break.

The Shadow Systems SS9F didn’t choke or break, and it went bang every time I pulled the trigger. However, I did notice that because the match barrel was a little oversize, for the first 75 rounds (or so) down-range I could feel the slide/barrel ka-chunking under recoil, moving more slowly than normal, until the new sharp edges (maybe on the barrel, maybe on the inside of the slide, maybe both) got a little worn in. After that it was smooth sailing.

It is most challenging to write about boring things. The only thing boring about the Shadow Systems SS9F is its performance. No, let me clarify that, its performance isn’t boring, writing about it is. Because there weren’t any weird malfunctions. It goes bang every time you pull the trigger, and its accuracy is as good as you’re ever going to get out of the Glock design thanks to a good trigger and an accurate barrel. Practicing my splits on USPSA targets or running plate racks with such a high-speed tricked out pistol was the most fun I’ve had generating once-fired brass in a long time. FN

The American REVOLUTION

REVOLUTION
DIRECT DI IMPINGEMENT

THE REVOLUTION HAS ONLY BEGUN.

We broke barriers and won awards when we released the piston driven Revolution. For 2019 we've introduced the Revolution DI (Direct Impingement). By popular demand, you get the same technology, same durability, and same features, but in a direct impingement system featuring our 9-position adjustable Dictator gas block and Renegade rail. There is virtually nothing left to upgrade.

The original Revolution weighed in at a paltry 7.35 pounds, turning heads for its incredible light weight and small stature. The Revolution DI weighs even less at 6.81 pounds with a 16" barrel, making it ideal for just about any situation you put it in.

The Revolution feels and shoots like an AR-15 because it is one.

2019 SHOT SHOW

EVERYTHING OLD IS NEW AGAIN

By Patrick Sweeney

The SHOT Show (ShotShow.org) is like Brigadoon, except that it happens for four days once a year instead of one day each century. The firearms glitterati converge on Vegas, lace their walking shoes up tight, make sure they have ample supplies of hand sanitizer and breath mints, and proceed to research firearms to excess.

How much excess? In addition to the 13-14-15 miles of aisles of the regular show (it is hard to calculate, but they try) there are new venues showing up every year. This year they even had a “First Time Exhibitor” ballroom on the fifth floor of the Sands Expo. (I hadn’t even known there was a fifth floor.)

For this year’s SHOT Show coverage, we’re going to try and pack it all into one feature, covering ammunition, rifles, handguns, shotguns, suppressors, optics and accessories.

AMMUNITION

The big news from Winchester was a new cartridge. Called the .350 Legend, my first thought on seeing it was “Well, that’s obvious” but then I had a chance to mull it over. Essentially, the ballisticians at Winchester took the basic .223 case, kept it a straight-wall design (although there is a slight taper, as much for bullet diameter as for ease of extraction) and sized it to fit into... ta-da, an AR-15 magazine. The operating pressure means it runs the DI gas system of an AR rifle, carbine or pistol just fine. The bullet weights for now are 150 and 180 grains for hunting loads. A 145 grain FMJ for low-cost practice, a 265 subsonic load, and a bonded 160 grain bullet. The Deer XP 150 grain bullet has a factory list of 2325 fps. That puts it better than the .35 Remington, and on-par with the .30-30, both classic deer woods cartridges.

Why? Stunningly, various State DNR have been keeping up on firearms and ammunition trends. It is now quite common to be able to hunt with handguns, in previously shotgun-only areas, with straight-walled cartridges in repeating actions. And there are some that allow rifles chambered in those cartridges. The previous common AR-15 cartridge that filled that particular niche was the .450 Bushmaster. You can say a lot of good things about the 450, but “low recoil” is not one of them.

So, for hunting season in the fall of 2019, you can use a .35 Remington or .30-30 equivalent cartridge, with a straight wall design, in your AR, be it rifle or pistol.

Browning

At the other end of the spectrum, Browning came out with an improved oldie but goodie. They call it Trail Force, and if you live in a place where there are nasty, biting, stinging or venomous critters, you might be packing a handgun to deal with them. It is currently only in .38 Special. But, it features a pair of copper-plated lead disks of .38 diameter. One disk is at the case mouth, the other nestled down on top of the powder charge. The space in-between is filled with #9 shot, for a total payload of 1/4 ounce, or 110 grains of snake-shredding goodness.

The new Winchester 350 Legend, a straight-wall hunting cartridge for the AR-15.

The latest in close-range vermin-popping loads, the Browning Trail Force is in .38 Special, and will put paid to a lot of local would-be hassles.

Tired of the recoil of the 450 Bushmaster? Need a hunting cartridge the DNR can cotton to? Here you go, the .350 Legend.

If you want to use Mil-equivalent loads in your Mil-standard M17 or M18, then SIG has the ammo for your SIG pistol. A 124 at +P velocities promises to be snappy, so don't go complaining about that. Rejoice in it.

SIG

In case you find your normal 9mm ammo just too normal, too vanilla, SIG has an option. They will be making 9mm NATO-spec ammo, 124 grain FMJs loaded to +P pressures, for those who want the full experience of shooting their M17 and M18 SIG pistols. Given that the non-+P 9mm loads SIG offers are plenty zippy, I expect the 124 FMJ+P load to be right snappy. And it will come in plain tan boxes, to match all the tan/coyote gear you already have.

And in the "Well, that's interesting" department, I had a chance to shoot the Brno 7.5. That's the hefty CZ75-derived pistol, chambered for a 7.5mm bullet. What it appears to be is a 10mm, necked down to .30, and pumped to as much chamber pressure as the basic CZ75 action can handle. Judging from the recoil, a lot. They say a 95 grain bullet is going 2,000 fps. From how quickly the bullet got to the far targets, that is a good estimate. (I don't shoot at the close targets at these events, what's the point?) Will it catch on? At 46 ounces, it is portly, but it needs it to handle the recoil. The ammo certainly does its part, and the trigger was very good. But with a reported priced of $5,000 per, I suspect the market will be limited.

Federal

Federal has expanded the line of Syntech loads, and you can now buy them in a range of colors. Yes, color-coded ammunition. The color helps you determine which ammo you have in hand, original Syntech, Syntech PCC and Syntech Action Pistol, red. These are loaded to make the Power Factor required by competition, as well as provide the proper recoil to get you accustomed to using a centerfire pistol. Syntech Training Match is purple, and those loads are recoil and velocity matched to duty loads, so police can get Syntech practice and be confident in practicing with ammo that has the correct recoil and point of impact.

They also come in the expected pistol calibers; 9mm, 40 and .45 ACP. 9mm weights from 115 to 147 grains, 40 from 165 to 205, and in .45 ACP you have the choice of 220 or 230 grains.

As a bonus, you can buy them in bulk. You can get 500 round of Syntech in a plastic box, a box that has a carry handle and is re-usable. And they are stackable, to boot.

DDupleks

Ever have an "oops" moment, and whack one of your gun clubs steel targets with a shotgun slug? I haven't, but I've seen the results of it. Training with slugs can be difficult. Well, DDupleks makes a frangible slug for shotguns. They basically encase the pellet payload in a frangible matrix. A slurry of shot and plastic. With an attached base plug to seal gases and grip the bore, the plug also acts as a mass-balanced stability aide. With the "Kaviar" slug, you can also do shoot-house work and not abuse the targets.

Frangible slugs? You betcha. DDupleks has them, and they promise to make shoot house work easier, and decrease the chances of pock-marking steel targets.

The Brno 7.5 ammunition delivers pretty much the ballistics of the .30 carbine, but out of a sidearm. Bullets got to the target right now, compared to standard handgun ammunition. Will it catch on? Time will tell.

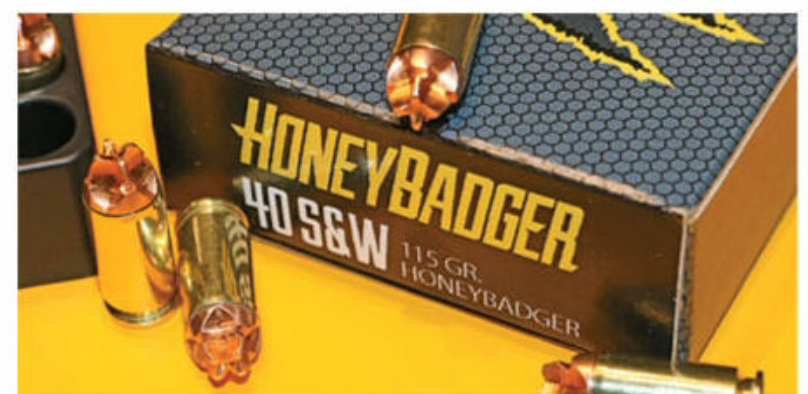

Federal has expanded both the number of Syntech loads, but also the packaging. Why settle for only 50 rounds, when you can buy 500?

Black Hills

Black Hills continues to push boundaries. They have added a slew of calibers to the Honey Badger line, including one obvious one, the .40 S&W, and one curious one, .45-70. While the .40 may be dead as a police cartridge, there are still a bazillion pistols out there chambered in it, and ammo companies will be making .40 ammo for the next couple of generations. If you still use a .40 (and if you are happy with it, why not?) then the new Honey Badger load will do wonders. The H-B is a scalloped solid-copper bullet that doesn't care about intermediate barriers. At 115 grains, it is speedy but not abusive in recoil.

The .45-70? If ever there was a cartridge that didn't need the Honey Badger to be effective, it is the .45-70.

Black Hills continues to expand the Honey Badger line, and those of you who still use the .40 will benefit from that.

Anyone who has seen “Cowboys and Aliens” knows that a .45-70 drops even alien ungulates DRT. But when Jeff Hoffman wants something to be more effective, he gets what he wants, and he doesn’t fool around. Does the new DoD Space Force know about these loads? They should.

RIFLES
Uintah Precision

Sometimes you just want to have some fun shooting, and not worry about burning out a barrel. Uintah Precision makes bolt-action uppers for AR lowers. This is a quick swap, press out the takedown pins, lift off the regular upper, place the Uintah upper on, press the pins back, you’re done. It even fed so out of regular AR magazines. When you cycle the bolt, it goes back

With the ability to quick-change your AR from a self-loader to a bolt-action rifle, the Uintah Precision upper offers a lot of versatility. Change your AR from truck gun to long range varmint-popper just by pushing two pins.

Just when you thought there were no ARs that could deal with Velociraptors, Rock River comes out with one chambered in .338 Win Mag. And one with a quick-change barrel design, no less.

into the buffer tube. You can take out the buffer and spring or leave them in. Calibers? Whatever caliber you can find that will fit into an otherwise standard AR upper. Uintah makes them with barrels installed, and you have your choice of AR-15 or AR-10 options.

Rock River Arms

Just when I thought I had seen it all, I walked onto the extra-thick carpeting of the Rock River booth, and was presented with the latest; their big hammer of an AR-based rifle. Chambered in .338 Winchester Magnum (yes, you read that right) the beast has a side-charging operating system, a quick-change barrel system hidden under an easy-off free-float hand-guard, is machined from billets of aluminum (veritable glacier-slabs of aluminum) and will make you the envy of the power-enthralled at your gun club.

At the other end of the size spectrum, they make an AR-15 carbine (and pistol version) as a dedicated .22LR.

HANDGUNS

Ruger teamed up with Doug Koenig to produce a Custom Shop version of their SR1911. I talked with Doug at the range, and had a chance to wring out one of the pistols for a few magazines.

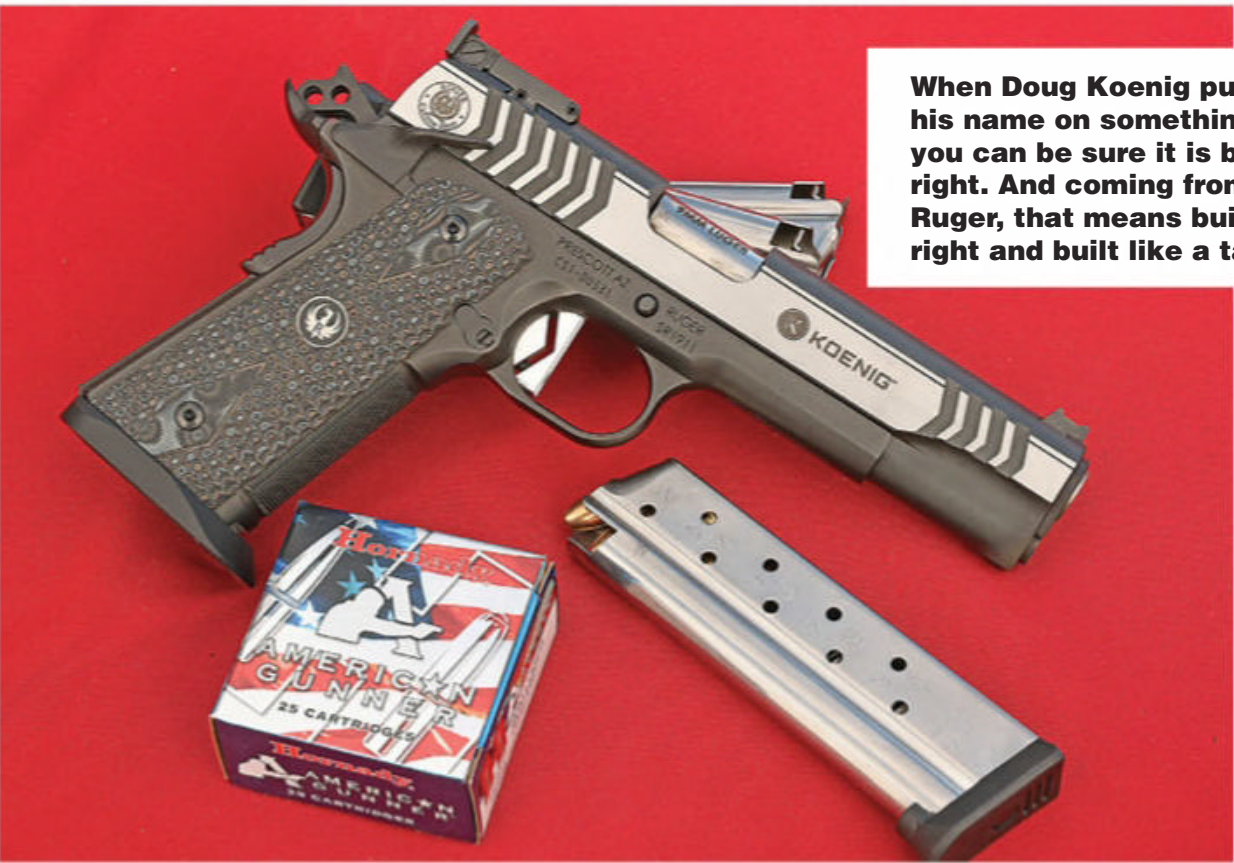

The first thing Doug told me was, “when I started talking with Ruger about this, I told them ‘We do this right, or we don’t do it.’” So the slide-to-frame fit is proper, the trigger is nice, the various extras are all fitted well. The cosmetics are tended to, and the performance? Well, when you have Doug calling hits on the steel plate I’m shooting at, 105 yards downrange, then you know a regular 5" 1911 is delivering. The initial offering, in 9mm Parabellum, was all pre-sold as of the day before the SHOT show. There will be another production run, and then? “We’ll see what the demand is for a .45” was all Doug would say.

If I wasn’t such a cheapskate gun writer, I’d have to have one. I may still.

From custom to production, I went from the Ruger range bay to the Bul range bay. They had one of their SAS II pistols, but an ultra-compact Officer-sized one. With a hi-cap magazine holding 15 rounds of 9mm,

When Doug Koenig puts his name on something, you can be sure it is built right. And coming from Ruger, that means built right and built like a tank.

The Bul SAS II is so compact, it is almost cute. But with a hi-cap magazine in there, it holds plenty of 9mm goodness for EDC.

If you wanted an engraved 1911, but have always fainted at the price of old-school, cut engraving, then the Ed Brown 3-D laser engraving might just be what you need.

The new Taurus 856 comes in a rainbow of colors, for those who feel that plain blue or stainless just aren't enough. This one is pink, but they offer half a dozen colors, and blue and stainless combos.

A custom shop CZ from CZ USA, that holds an impressive amount of 9mm ammo. Accuracy, a very nice trigger, soft recoil, and a grip shape to lust for, the A01-LD has it all.

an accessory rail, an aluminum frame, and interesting lines, it is almost enough to make me consider carrying something that is chambered in a caliber that doesn't begin with the numeral four.

In the super-custom note, Ed Brown continues to amaze. Those of us with taste appreciate engraving. Those with taste but not a lot of money have to settle for laser-engraving, which is not bad. The problem with laser engraving is that it doesn't have shading, it is just lines, like bank-note engraving. Well, the brains at Ed Brown found a new process. Called 3-D engraving, it is laser engraving, but it produces a surface that those who know art will know as bas-relief. (Pronounced "bah-relief") The effect is striking, and is not easily distinguished from cut engraving of the same style. The sample I handled (and lusted after) was their basic stainless government model. The base gun from Ed Brown, say an Executive Target, will start at about $2,600. To get the level of engraving I saw on their 3-D sample, cut the traditional way, would cost you not less than ten grand extra. Likely more, and with a wait of years. The sample pistol had a tag on it of $3,995.

Talk about a game-changer. 3-D is a tenth of the cost of traditional, looks better than laser-engraving, and won't take the years of traditional. My check-book is currently in hiding, not to be seen since my return from SHOT.

Taurus

Back when I was training in the martial arts, we had a class of students we called "bulldogs." Some were skilled, others were not. Some picked things up quickly, and some took a long time to learn. But the one thing they had in common was; they wouldn't quit. In an interesting confluence, Taurus has just released their new 856 revolvers. They just won't quit, and their new product, in an earlier era, might have been called a bulldog. They make the 856, a six-shot snubbie revolver, that can handle +P ammo (probably better than you can) and as if that wasn't enough, there's more. They offer it in a host of colors, and the trigger is the nicest I've felt in a non-custom compact revolver in a long time. And at the MSRP of $379, you get all that goodness at a bargain price.

CZ-USA

I've known Angus Hobdell since before he had to flee England due to their inane gun laws. He has always ever been a fan of the CZ-75 pistol, and has made sure that CZ and CZ-USA do right by it. (Not a difficult task, by the way, it is a good gun even when not race-tuned.) Well, for 2019, CZ-USA and the Custom Shop have a new product: the CZC A01-LD. Whew. It is a steel frame CZ 9mm, built for competition, but entirely suitable for EDC. What they do is take a railed frame, and not machine the rail in it. In fact, they leave the dustcover as wide, long and thick, as they can. Then, it gets a big ambi safety, a fiber optic front and solid rear sight, and trigger tuning. Since it uses P-09 magazines, you get 19+1 capacity, and if you opt for the extended mag pads, that jumps to 21+1.

Mossberg

If the use of "Mossberg" and "pistol" in the same sentence causes your head to spin, welcome to the club.

The pistol world comes full circle. Now we have a polymer-framed looking pistol, but with a metal frame. In this instance, an aluminum one, machined from billet. Nemo, makers of the .300 Win Mag AR, now offer a 9mm hi-cap as your sidearm.

The Mossberg MC1sc (Mossberg Carry 1 sub compact) is aimed squarely at the EDC market. A short barrel, at 3.4 inches, and a short grip, with a magazine that holds six or seven rounds, the MC1sc is meant to be a deep-concealment, or hot weather pistol, for those who carry every day. As is the modern imperative, it is a polymer framed, striker-fired pistol, in 9mm Parabellum, and with low-profile sights, it promises to be a faithful companion to your daily routine. Oh, and it isn't the first pistol Mossberg made. The first came out in 1919, and it was a four-shot, four-barreled derringer-like pistol

Nemo

I tested the Nemo .300 Win Mag AR-10 a few years back, and I was quite impressed. Nemo is also now making a hi-cap pistol. The Monark MK-9 differs from your usual run of pistols in that the frame is

A 12-gauge shotgun that looks like an AR-15, but isn't anvil-heavy, bulky as a tank or an ugly stick? Yes, and it comes to us from Rock Island Armory.

A suppressor on a Garand? I'm not sure I'm quite ready for that yet.

machined out of a billet of aluminum, not molded in polymer. But it looks like a polymer pistol, and uses a striker system to set off the cartridges. The rigidity of an aluminum frame promises to create a cleaner trigger pull, and the one I dry-fired had a nice trigger. The five-inch barrel promises to wring out all the fps your 9mm ammo can provide, and with hi-cap magazines made by Mec-Gar, it will be reliable.

SHOTGUNS
Rock Island Armory

RIA? Yes. They came out with the VR80, a 12 gauge shotgun that looks like an AR-15, but doesn't look like it was built from a description provided by someone on a three-day drunk. It looks good. The weight is manageable, the recoil not obnoxious, the reliability exemplary (judging from the ankle-deep sea of fired hulls on the range, left there by the shooters before me) and a top rail on the receiver means you can mount anything that will survive the recoil of a 12 gauge. Standard magazines are five rounds, with longer ones available, it comes with a screw-in choke system, and works with 2-3/4 and 3" shells. Heck, with a five-shot mag and slugs, this would be a smokin' deer hunting setup if you hunt in a shotgun-only zone.

Suppressors

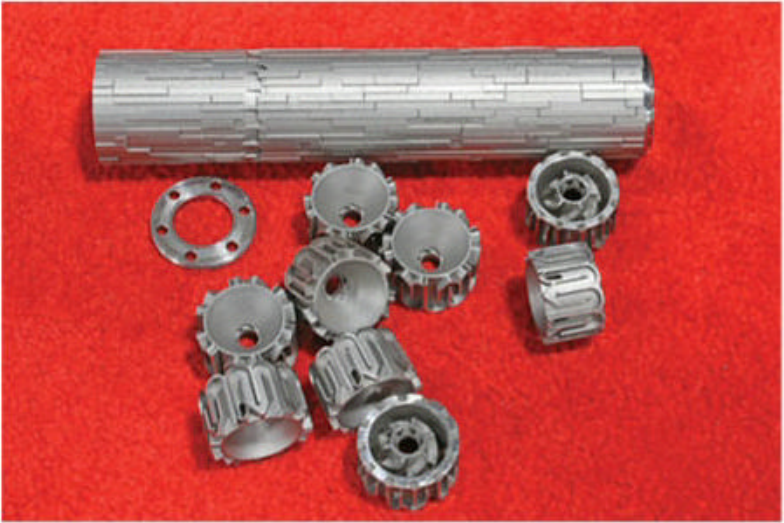

OK, just to get things started, when I dropped into the Silencerco booth, they had a Garand with a suppressor on it. I have no intention of putting a suppressor on any of my Garands, but holy cow, I have to tip my hat to those guys. In the real world of suppressors, Silencerco had what is the newest advance in rimfire cans; the buildable suppressor. Their Switchback 22 can be disassembled and put back together in such a way as to provide just a useful amount of suppression, at almost no size and weight, (smallest) to the most you can wring out of a can. (Largest) For the quietest rimfire plinking. And, it is rated for the .17s, (Not the big Winchester) and 5.7x28 as well.

Thompson Machine

The Thompson Machine Horizon is a modular rimfire suppressor. Each of the ten baffle segments can be assembled, or not, to create a suppressor the length you want. Obviously, longer is quieter. They are made in two lengths, short and long, and you can arrange them in any order. The base/mount is made of Titanium (Grade 5) and the baffles and end cap are all 7075-T6 aluminum. With all the parts screwed together, the full-up weight is less than four ounces, and the length is less than seven inches. And the best part? This has an MSRP of $449. We do live in a golden age.

Thompson Machine horizon. Take the basic, base and end-cap, and make it super-small. Or install all ten baffle segments and make it ssshhh-quiet. And take it all apart to clean it, because rimfire ammo is grubby.

Ugly? Sure. Quiet? You bet. 3-D printed and made of Inconel? Sure thing. Easy to clean, and also available in Titanium? Of course. H&P is proud that it is ugly.

H&P Manufacturing

After last year's "God, that's ugly" H&P just jumped right on board. With a banner that read (and trademarked, no less) "Ugly Suppressors". The one that caught my eye was the GEO 556 in "Brick" pattern. These are 3-D printed, all-Inconel suppressors that are so tough they make nails seem wimpy. If the thought of an all-Inconel suppressor strikes you as

The Sig MODX-9 and MODX-45 each come with everything you need to mount them on the appropriate firearms. And, being modular, they can be assembled in the length and quiet level you need for the task at hand.

heavy, (and the one I hefted was a tad portly) then you can have the same thing in all-titanium.

It disassembles into separate baffles, so it is easily cleaned in an ultrasonic cleaner.

SIG

The SIG MODX-9 and MODX-45 suppressors are lust worthy suppressors. 3-D printed and made of titanium, they are segmented or modular. That is, each baffle is a threaded baffle, and you assemble it to be as long or short as you want. Even short, they are effective, and as with every SIG suppressor, you get all the gear. Since these are pistol suppressors (the “9” and the “45” should have been a clue) they will come with boosters threaded for the appropriate calibers, as well as fixed-thread adapters for use on carbines. The pattern on the outside? No extra charged for that, and you will not be the first person to make a comparison to the Death Star.

OPTICS

SIG

The latest from SIG is one of the coolest things I have seen since, well, ever. The BDX optics are rifle scopes that talk to laser rangefinders. Once the rangefinder and scope are linked, ranging a target illuminates the specific LED in the reticle that indicates your hold-over. You can also program the reticle to a specific bullet and velocity, and tell it to light up each 100 yard or meter intervals. I watched through the scope as the tech who was explaining it to me changed the ballistic coefficient, and the LEDs all shifted to the new drop calculations. The reticle even lights up when you are canting the scope. From 3.5-10X up to 6.5-20X, built like tanks, and can be had with a combo laser rangefinder, if it were any better it would be prohibited in rifle matches. And may well be, for all I know. Not in competitions, the coolest thing, ever.

Meopta

European quality in glass and construction? Meopta has that. They also have a new line of riflescopes, the Optika6. The coolest of the bunch for me was the 1-6x24. This is a 1-6X zoom (and a true 1X, I looked closely to make sure of that) with a top turret that can be set to zero, so you can always return right back to your original setting. The caps are rubber-armored, and it has a power ring with the power visible to the

The Meopta Optika6 line delivers Euro-quality optics at a wallet-friendly price. The 1-6x24 should be on your AR-15, be it an M4gery or a Mk18 clone.

Those glowing LEDs on the vertical axis of the reticle? They are the correct holds for given distance increments, for the load selected. And as if that wasn't; enough, the LED on the left tells us we are canting the scope. BDX rules.

The Badger Ordnance reticle leveler makes it easy to get the optics square in the mount. After that, it is up to the rifle rail and your technique to keep from canting things.

rear, and this comes in a one-piece tube. It also has a new idea in reticles; a Dichroic reticle, which offers battery-free illumination in low-light conditions. The best part? The Optika6 MSRP starts at $499. That means it will be less in-store. Four Benjamins, for a first-class 1-6X optic to park on my EDC AR? This I've got to have.

ACCESSORIES

Badger Ordnance, oh where were they when I was still gunsmithing? They showed me the neatest gadget, a reticle leveler that was cool beyond belief. It is a pic rail on a surface plate. You put the plate wherever you can, or need to, and use the adjustments to level it. There's a bubble level built-in. You then bolt on the scope and mount, and level the reticle using a plumb bob. A plumb bob, you ask? That is simply a weight hanging on a string. Dead straight and vertical, it is. If you do that, and then put the scope and mount on a rifle, and it isn't; level, there is one of two things going on: the rifle doesn't have the top rail square to the receivers, or your customer cants his rifle. Neither is fix-able (the rifle can't be re-machined, and the customer most likely can't be re-trained) but at least you know the setup is straight, and any changes you make are ones you need to, for real reasons.

Real Avid

Speaking of gunsmithing, found a suitable case for all your AR tools yet? Real Avid can do that, and do it one better. They have a case that is already filled with their AR gunsmithing tools, called the AR-15 Armorer's Master Kit. In it you will find the tools you need to take apart, rebuild, assemble, or just strip and clean, an AR-15. And they are all nestled in their own comfy compartments in the clamping-shut and handle-equipped carry case. This includes a torque wrench, one of the least-used and most-needed tools any AR-15 gun plumber should have.

In case you are wondering, you cannot acquire all the tools in the case, for less than the cost of the cased set. Don't even think about it. And one extra beauty

With everything you need but a cup of coffee, the Real Avid AR-15 kit comes in its own storage and travel case, so you can keep all your tools together.

Those of us who use suppressors, who need the Gasbuster charging handle, can now have it in ambidextrous form. Life is good.

of the case is if someone “borrows” a tool, you know it. There’s a blank spot.

PRI Gasbuster Ambi

What with suppressors appearing everywhere (I can’t remember the last time I was at the gun club, and there wasn’t at least one other shooter there with something suppressed) we all have to deal with the “gas in the face” problem. Back when it was simply annoying, PRI offered their Gasbuster charging handle. Today, a simple, one-sided charging handle is so 1999. PRI took the original Gasbuster, and made it an ambidextrous charging handle. Yes, it may seem simple, but it isn’t, entirely, and now you can have ambi charging, and gas busting, all in one parts change.

Fixit Sticks

The Fixit Sticks people now offer a deluxe case and toolkit. You get four inch-pound pre-set torque tools, a T-handle with extension, and sixteen tips. Also there are a pair of socket adapters so you can properly tighten down scope mounts using hex head Fixit Sticks now have the complete set. Everything you need to work on firearms, in one convenient and pre-set torque wrench set, to mount scopes, tighten action screws, even fix the coffee maker, if need-be.

bolts instead of slotted screws. You may not be able to work on an internal combustion engine with this, but there is pretty much nothing in the way of firearms work you can’t do with it. The deluxe case also has enough extra room in it that you could add in specialized tips for specialized uses, and the whole package is compact enough you can stuff it in your gear bag and almost lose it in there.

Samson Mfg.

Yes, we know of them as the handguard, sights and mounts company, but for those of you who have the S&W M&P as your EDC or competition handgun of choice, they now make mag extensions. The extensions are contoured to match the M&P, they have extraction grooves on the sides in case you need to rip the old mag out, and they add three more rounds to capacity. They use the factory spring, and you can have yours in one of six colors, from formal Black to Robin Egg Blue.

Samson expands the line, and takes care of the users of M&P pistols, who may not have had much choice when it came to magazine basepads. Now you do, and you get more rounds as a result. And in colors, too.

Want to keep loaded magazines handy? Want to make it easy to snatch them as-needed? Here you go, with racks and cases from MSS.

You can even use the extensions to sort your mags. Use the Black extensions for your EDC mags, and have the practice mags, the ones that will get beaten-up and abused, using some other color.

Mag Storage Solutions

The question of how to store magazines, lots of magazines, is one we all struggle with. Mag Storage Solutions solves that problem with spring-loaded magazine clips that hold individual mags in such a way that you can easily snatch them as you need them. And if you want to grab a bigger supply, then they make a case to hold the clip set, so you can grab six mags at once. You can mount the loaded mags in a rack or clip, on the door to your gun safe. Or next to a likely shooting position. (A blind overlooking a lure for hogs, perhaps?) If you want to grab 'n go, then the zippered case that holds six mags is held to the wall or your safe door with Velcro. ARs and AKs, pistol mags, they make them in various sizes. One tip: if you do this, use a clear marking system on the spine of your mags, so you know what you are grabbing.

Taylor Freelance

Speaking of magazines, my old friend Robin Taylor has outdone himself. Given the popularity of the PCC in competition, and the never-ending quest for more ammo, he now makes a Glock extension that makes your 9mm PCC a 51+1 capacity gamestick. No, really, a full box of ammo in the magazine, plus one, and still one more in the chamber. He calls it the "Goliath" and I can understand that. If your club shoots PCC, Goliath will eliminate the need for reloads. And if your club shoots PCC stages where you will have to reload anyway, using this magazine, let us know. That much shooting is against the law in some states, and medically ill-advised in others. Too bad for them, and good for those of us who want to shoot. Machined from billet aluminum, with extra spring, and able to take more abuse than you can, the Goliath will probably outlast the Glock mag it is bolted to.

Griffin Armament

Griffin makes first-class suppressors, and you should definitely look into their quiet-makers. But we don't always have suppressors on our firearms, and they came up with a neat gadget that you need to add to your gear. Called the Micro Carry Comp, it is a

Yes, that is a 9mm magazine that holds 51 rounds. And the texture you see makes it easy to snatch out of a belt holder, or storage rack. When it is empty, it probably makes a useful cosh.

A thread protector that is also a mini-comp? Yes, and you don't have to have a different, special, holster to hold it, either.

thread protector that is also a comp. Unlike the big ones that require a special holster to cover it, the Micro Comp is a thread protector with a built-in, minimalist comp. It vents in all directions, so it won't do much to combat muzzle rise, but it will take the snap out of shooting.

Best part? You can get one with a replacement barrel for your Glock, the one you got to mount your Griffin Armament suppressor onto your Glock with.

Torxmag

With the red-hot popularity of PCC (pistol-caliber carbine) not easing up, those who want in, but don't want/need/afford a new lower find themselves in a fix. Well, Torxmag has a solution. It is a two-piece adapter that clamps into your regular AR lower (they won't fall out when the mag is out) and accepts a Glock magazine. You can convert a spare standard lower to 9mm, with a Glock-specific upper. You can swap your one-and-only (you poor guy) AR from .223/5.56 to 9mm, easily. I watched the inventor install an adapter. It took him 22 seconds. The Torxmag adapter uses the regular AR mag catch to hold the Glock magazine in. Torxmag makes special magazines for this, but each adapter also comes with a template to modify your Glock mags. Modifying them to work in the Torxmag does not preclude using them in your Glock. Even if it did, who cares? Were Glock mags any more common, you'd find them lying at the side of the road.

If you want to try a PCC, but you don't want to buy an entire AR in 9mm for Glock mags, then Torxmag has the solution. It is a handy and non-permanent adapter to your regular AR. In well under a minute, you are ready for pistol-caliber shooting.

Final Note

Oh, and just when you thought there wasn't enough new, different or just out-of-the-box thinking going on, SIG announced a new machine gun. No, we won't get to test it. New-production belt-feds are not something even famous gun writers can get on loan. But, the new MG from SIG has a number of notable features; it is pounds lighter than an M240. (In all fairness, that is one anvil of an MG, so producing something lighter is not exactly a challenge.) Quick barrel change, soft recoil, and chambered in .388 Norma Magnum.

I had one gun writer who was not as clever as he thought, comment "Oh, the .40 of machine guns. Light as a nine, but hits like a forty-five."

I think, unlike the 40 in handguns, that the SIG .338 has a useful slot in the small arms pantheon. It is lighter than an M240, so that right there makes it a useful tool. With nearly the range and power of the .50 BMG, but at one-quarter the weight, you can mount two of them on any vehicle in place of one M2HB, and load four times as much ammo as you might have, and still make the weight of one M2HB and its ammo load.

With a proper tripod (shooting at range with a bipod, prone, is not nearly as effective) you can take advantage of the scope rail on the top cover to mount whatever optics you need/want/desire. I can see a 5-25X variable on top suddenly producing consistent hits out past 2,000 meters easy. With a BDC reticle, and an assistant with a laser range-finder, an MG team suddenly become gods. Well, demi-gods.

Not that any of us will ever get to test one, but holy cow, SIG makes a belt-fed machine gun chambered in .338 Norma Mag! What is the world coming to?

The Army has been trying, unsuccessfully, to replace the Browning M2HB since before I first shot one, back in the Reagan era. They may not yet succeed (Browning was a demi-god of design), but the SIG 338 looks like a great added tool for long-range persuasion. Next up, we have to call it the 8.5xsomething, and keep the Ordnance Department from making a total hash of it, by spending years “improving” it.

Conclusion

The SHOT Show is incredible, impressive, overwhelming, and for industry only. It is open only to those who work in, or cover, the firearms industry. If you want to get access, be prepared to demonstrate that you really, truly do work at a gun shop, or for a firearms or firearms equipment manufacturer. If you are in the media, you have to show you have actually worked professionally at it, not just posted a few blog entries on firearms. It isn’t easy, and don’t be surprised if the SHOT Show bosses tell you “No.”

If you do make it, wear good shoes, and be prepared to walk until your feet feel like they are going to burst into flames.

Yes, it is a great sacrifice we here at Firearms News undertake, to bring back the inside info, but hey, someone has to do it. You’re welcome. FN

WEAPONS OF THE CZECHOSLOVAK LEGION IN RUSSIA, 1917–1920, PART 3

By Paul Scarlata

As the Legion made its way across Siberia opposition from the Red Guards, partisans and sabotage were often the least of their problems. Daily, they faced the seemingly endless miles of Siberian taiga (swampy forest) and steppe, lack of supplies, inadequate communications, the poor condition of the trakt, bitter winters in which a man could freeze to death in fifteen minutes, hot, humid summers with voracious swarms of mosquitoes that drove men and animals mad. That many more didn't desert — or go crazy — speaks volumes of their loyalty, morale, and sense of duty.

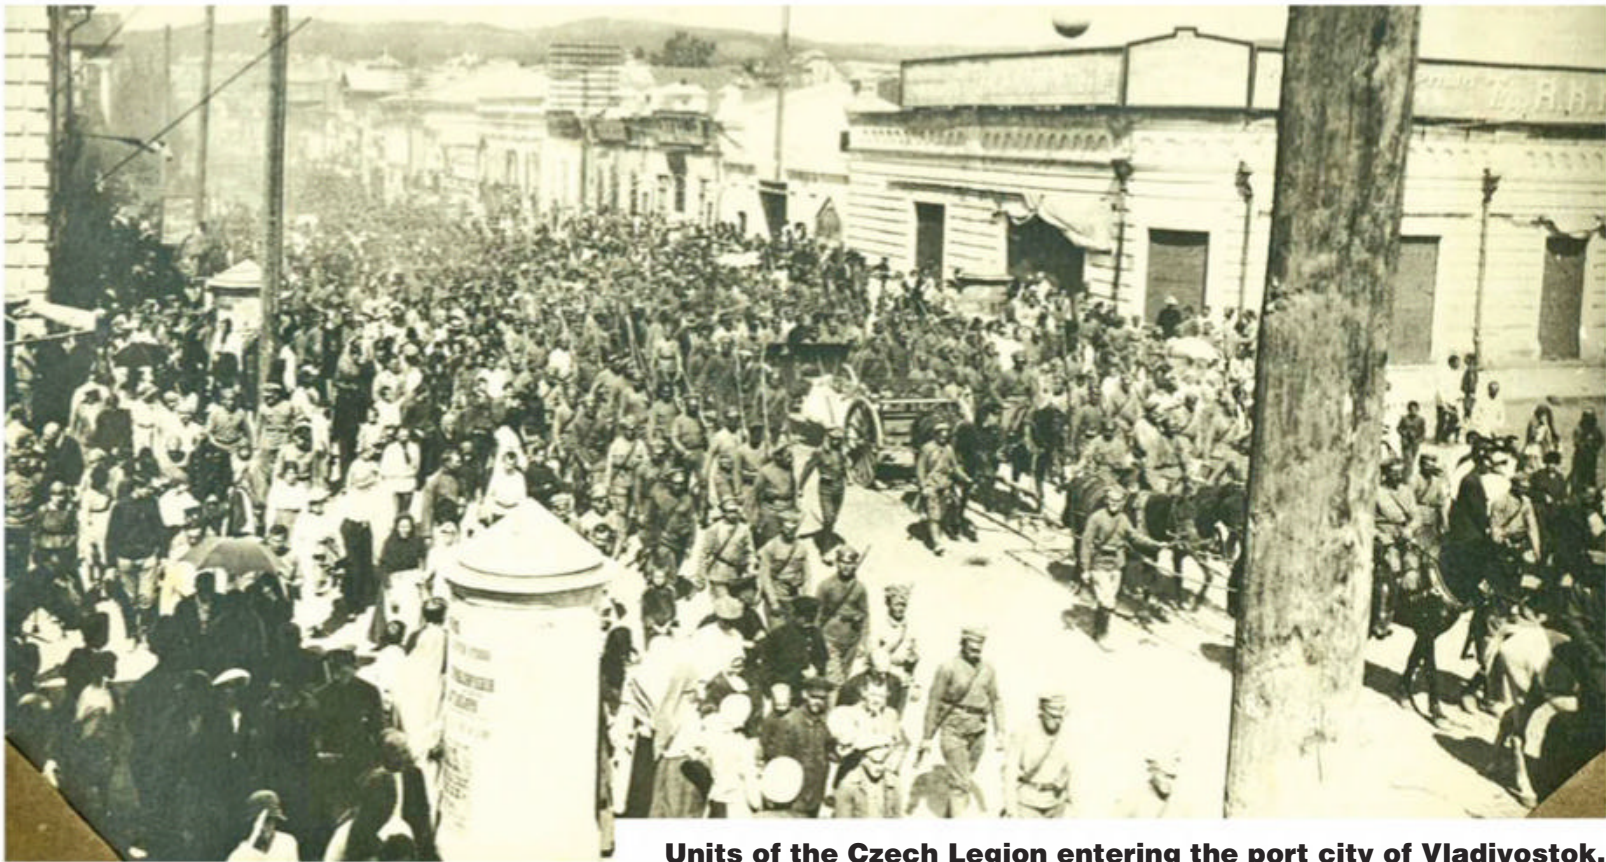

While this was taking place, it had been decided in London and Paris that Bolshevism must be crushed and the eastern front against Germany reestablished. Unable to spare troops for transfer to Russia, arms, supplies and money were provided to, hopefully, bolster the various White forces and it was decided that the Legion would provide military support.

Shortly after the Legion took control of Vladivostok in June 1918, American, British, Japanese, Canadian, Italian and French troops began landing. The ports of Murmansk and Archangel in northern Russia were occupied by British, American, French and Canadian troops, purportedly to “protect” Allied military supplies there from falling into the hands of the Germans who were in Finland aiding that country’s white forces against the Bolsheviks.

Despite protestations to the contrary, the Allied troops soon became involved on the White side in the civil war.

Military police units that patrolled Vladivostok included (L to R): Canadians, Poles, British, Chinese, Americans, Czechs, French, Japanese and Italians.

1918. British sailors guarding a train near Vladivostok.

Armored trains, Broneviki, were tactically important in the vast distances of Siberia. Note how they are armed with a variety of machine guns and artillery.

As was mentioned in Part II of this report, Legion echelons were ordered to cease their eastward trek and begin “holding operations” along the railway. While some Czech units began moving westward, others traveled north and south of the line to occupy strategic cities and river ports and thus deny them to the Reds. They were told they had to prevent the Germans from taking over Russia and using its vast natural resources to reinvigorate the war against the Allies.

In July 1918, the Legion captured Ekaterinburg where they discovered the grisly scene of the murders of Tsar Nicholas II and the Imperial family. When they occupied the city of Kazan a few weeks later they captured a train containing Imperial Russia’s gold reserves — $333,000,000 in 1918 US dollars.

The Bronevik

One of the most unique weapons used by all of the warring factions in Siberia was the armored train, or Bronevik. These consisted of steel plated engines and railway cars armed with multiple machine guns in addition to gun cupolas with artillery that gave them the appearance of land going naval vessels. Some had special cars for carrying horses which allowed cavalry to outflank any attempt at barricading the tracks. While slow moving, these multi-engine, reptilian appearing monsters provided mobile artillery support for infantry and formed a tactical reserve which could be moved quickly to where it was needed. Having a Bronevik or, better yet, Broneviki, was a status symbol for any military commander and gave his force a definite tactical edge. They were the “battleships” of the civil war in Siberia.

As the Legion’s “holding operations” took them back the way they had come, Bolshevik opposition stiffened resulting in pitched battles for control of the railroad. Often, the Reds would capture a city, only to find themselves attacked by Czech units moving simultaneously east and west. In August of 1918, a series of

His 'Tax Loophole' Can Make Your Fortune!

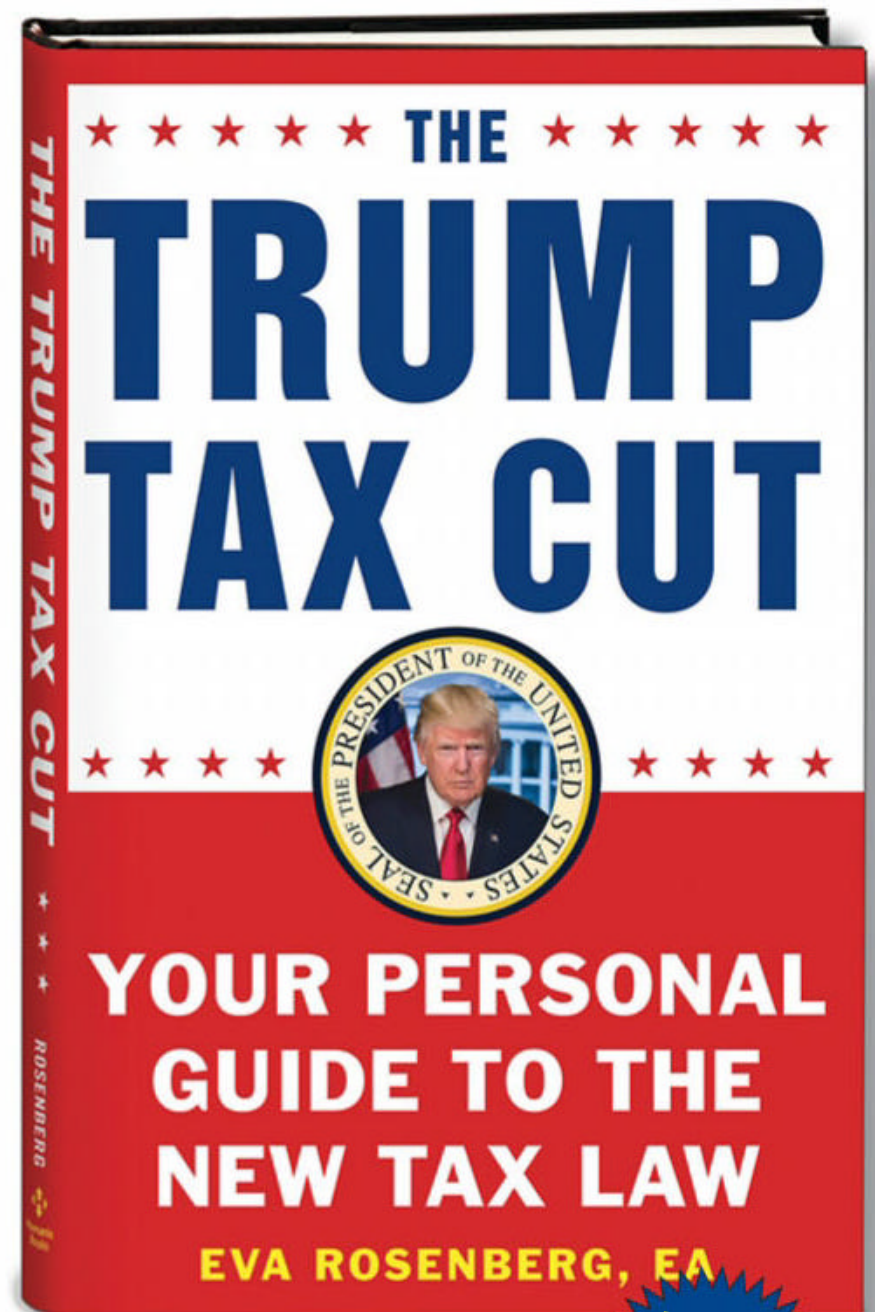

President Trump's new tax law is fully effective and millions are finding out about the little-known 'Trump Tax Loophole'.

This new loophole will save taxpayers who use it billions in taxes – and slash their personal taxes by 20 percent! This loophole can be used by anyone if they follow several simple steps – dropping everyone's effective tax rate. The highest income-earners can see their tax rate drop to a shockingly low 29 percent!

The Tax Loophole is detailed in the new bestseller The Trump Tax Cut by renowned tax expert Eva Rosenberg. The Trump Tax Cut is your guidebook to the biggest tax cut in history. But you need to find out how the law works to get its benefits.

Here's the deal: Trump slashed corporate rates to 21 percent, but personal income taxes not so much — to 35 percent for the highest-income level. But Trump gave you a secret "trap door" for lower taxes. If you're an independent contractor or small business person (many employed people can change their status!) there is a special deduction of 20 percent of your income that makes your effective rate just 29 percent!

Already hundreds of thousands are taking advantage of this loophole. Anyone can grab it but there are requirements, so get The Trump Tax Cut for all the facts!

somewhat lackadaisical anti-Bolshevism led to an Allied engineered coup that set up a former Imperial naval officer, Admiral Aleksandr Vasilevich Kolchak, as the “Supreme Ruler of Russia.” While Kolchak’s administration received Allied recognition and military support, his relationship with the Czechs quickly deteriorated.

For the most part, the Legionnaires were unashamedly democratic, efficient, brave, loyal, and reliable. As chaos descended upon Siberia they were often the sole, remaining examples of decency and civilization.

In his book The Midnight War (McGraw Hill, 1978), Richard Goldhurst describes the situation quite well when he says, “Only where the Czechs held the line was there pity, help, and order. The commanding officer of every Czech echelon tried to adjudicate (local) disputes... The echelons took on refugees. Nuns, priests, young students, and nursing mothers found shelter in the vans.”

In other words, the Legion was the antithesis of the reactionary forces that had gathered around Kolchak whose “armies” were made up of unenthusiastic conscripts and Cossack renegades, commanded by corrupt officers who were only interested in lining their own pockets and fostering their own power. While the Czechs were rarely defeated in battle, Kolchak's forces were as likely to retreat at the first sign of resistance as they were to desert to the Reds. Whether it was jealousy or an inferiority complex, Kolchak continually alienated the Legion. It would turn out to be a suicidal decision on his part.

Machine Guns Of The Czech Legion

As amazing as it may seem, the situation regarding machine guns in the Tsarist army was not as confused as other small arms. In fact, the biggest problem — and one shared by most of the combatants — was them not having enough machine guns. As with rifles, machine guns production got off to a slow start but by 1916 the Russian army had — in part thanks to battlefield captures — adequate numbers of full auto weapons.

Because of its long range accuracy, the machine gun was especially useful on the open steppes of southern Russian, while its ability to lay down a heavy volume of fire was vital when fighting in Siberia's heavy forests. Lastly, it was the perfect weapon for arming lightly manned, remote outposts and Broneviki. The — usually outnumbered — Czechs appreciated the advantages that machine guns provided them and made every attempt to accumulate as many as possible.

Legkiy Pulemet Madsen obr. 1902g — Shortly before the Russo-Japanese War (1904 – 1905) the Russian adopted the Madsen light machine gun for issue to cavalry units. This recoil operated, air cooled gun was fed from a top mounted magazine and usually mounted on a bipod. They remained in service throughout WWI and the ensuing civil war.

Pulemet Maxima obr. 1905g — the first machine gun manufactured in Russia. Based upon Hiram Maxim’s toggle breech locking system, it was notable for its bronze water jacket and rotary feed block. This heavy (108 lbs. including tripod mount), recoil operated, water cooled weapon was produced at the Tula arsenal. Guns were often equipped with a steel shield to protect the gunners, but the additional weight made this accessory unpopular and they were often discarded.

Pulemet Maxima obr. 1910g — the most widely used Russian machine gun was the Model 1910 Maxim. Mechanically similar to the obr. 1905g, its most distinctive feature was the wheeled “Sokolov” mount which enabled the gun to be easily pulled by its three man crew, which was helpful considering its total weight of 122 pounds. Early guns had smooth, steel water jackets but later fluted jackets were utilized to provide greater cooling surface. The obr. 1910g proved itself during WWI and remained in Russian service until 1945.

With the Armistice on the Western front, the Allies became further involved in Russia. In the Baltic, British naval forces supported Lithuanian, Latvian, and Estonian nationalist forces seeking independence from Russia, in addition to supplying White Russian armies attempting to capture St. Petersburg. In the Black Sea region, French, Greek, and Serbian forces occupied the port of Odessa so as to funnel supplies to White forces in the Crimea and Ukraine.

But the White leaders distrusted each other and were never able to coordinate their campaigns against the Reds. By 1919 the Bolsheviks had defeated or contained most of them, allowing Lenin to turn more attention and resources to the fighting in Siberia. In this he was aided by the war weariness in Europe which made it politically unacceptable for the Allied governments to send additional troops to Russia.

Throughout the bitter winter of 1918–1919, the Legion did its best to hold the so called “Railway Front,” but Kolchak’s forces were melting away under increased Bolshevik pressure. In many sectors, the only reliable units were now the Czechs and small contingents of Allied troops.

Partisan attacks and sabotage along the railway increased, requiring that more and more troops to be taken from the front for security duty.

In the rear, several of Kolchak’s commanders — the brutal Cossack atamans Grigori Mikhaylovich Semenov and Ivan Pavlovich Kalmykov being the worst examples — were attempting to carve out personal fiefdoms, armed and financed by the Japanese who had their own designs on post-civil war Siberia.²

A group of Legionnaires take a break for a smoke in the frozen Siberian wilderness.

In late June, the elite of Kolchak's army, the British trained and equipped "Immortals," shot their officers and deserted en masse to the Reds. In short order, the front collapsed as most members of the Kolchak government and officer corps fled in a desperate attempt to save their own skins.

It became evident to the Legion that the situation was beyond saving and they began making plans to get out of Siberia. Echelons began an organized withdrawal, leapfrogging eastward, making stands where necessary to prevent the Reds from pursuing too closely. As the Czechs departed Omsk, Admiral Kolchak was granted permission — under pressure from the French high command — for his personal trains and the Russian gold reserves to accompany them. On November 14, 1919, the Red Guards entered Omsk.

With the collapse of Kolchak's government, those Allied nations with troops in Siberia ordered their withdrawal. American troops had been sent to Siberia for the express purpose of "rescuing" the Legion and the soldiers of the 27th and 31st Infantry Regiments had formed close bonds with the Czechs. These Doughboys continued to guard strategic sections of the railway east of Lake Baikal and near Vladivostok until all the Czech echelons had safely withdrawn.

The last of the Legion echelons, with Kolchak's trains and the gold reserves, found themselves cut off by Bolshevik forces. Determined to get all of the legionnaires out safely, the Czech National Council in Vladivostok instructed them to negotiate with the Reds who demanded that the "Supreme Ruler" be turned over to them — along with the gold. As the Allies had washed their hands of Kolchak, the Czechs saw no reason to waste lives and resources to protect him any longer, and on January 14, 1920, acceded to the Red's demands.³ Anxious to see the Legion gone as quickly as possible, Moscow and the Czech National Council announced an armistice in Siberia which allowed the Legion unopposed passage and in February the remaining Czech echelons reached Vladivostok.

Ivan Kalamakov, the ataman of the Ussuri Cossacks, was a pawn of the Japanese and only interested in increasing his own power at the expense of the Siberian peasants.

Grigori Semenov's Transbaikal Cossacks were known for their rapacity and cruelty towards all who interfered in his attempt to gain power in Siberia.

1920. Legionnaires marching through the Prague, the capital of the new Republic of Czechoslovakia.

By May of 1920 the last units of the Legion had boarded chartered Japanese ships and departed Siberia. They returned to the newly independent republic of Czechoslovakia where many of its members rose to high positions in the government and armed forces.

Battle hardened Legion veterans formed the nucleus of the republic's new army, which would become one of the best equipped, trained, and motivated in all of Europe. An army that, in 1938, would be betrayed to Nazi Germany by the same "allies" for whom they had fought, froze, and shed their blood across the length of Siberia.

1 Specifications for the Pulemet Maxima obr. 1905g were similar.

2 Semenov and Kalmykov were homicidal thugs whose forces consisted of deserters, renegades, bandits, and criminals. Rather than fight Bolsheviks, they preferred to loot, torture, and rape hapless peasants.

3 On February 7, 1920, Admiral Kolchak and his prime minister were executed by the Bolsheviks.

9x18 Makarov Czech CZ-82

Czech CZ-82 9x18 Makarov semi-auto, surplus sidearm featuring 3.9 inch barrel, black polycoat finish with plastic grips, and ambi safety. A very heavy duty and accurate pistol. Has polygonal rifling for long barrel life (rifling not visible, appears as smoothbore). The CZ-82 replaced the older CZ-52 and served the Czech military in the 1980's and 90's. It comes with one 12 round magazine and leather duty holster. In good condition with coated finish flaking off (sometimes significantly) and scratches on the grips. Holster condition or completeness varies. C&R eligible. Add $20.00 for Hand Select.

AR15 FLAT TOP UPPER COMPLETE PARTS SETS

Double time it and get these before they're gone..... Everything present in this Kit to make an AR15 type rifle except for the Lower Receiver. All parts included are new mfg parts. Sling and magazine are not included. Buttstock supplied is the telescoping 6 position M4 stock with correct buffer and spring and the 16" barrel is brand new and has the front sight assy. installed. We use the industry standard hammer/trigger pin with a diameter of .154":

Most Lower receivers use this size pin although there are some Colt mfg. lower receivers that use .170" pins which are not compatible with standard parts. The Upper Receiver is a flattop model and we offer it with and without the carry handle/rear sight configuration.

DEAL OF THE YEAR !!!
COLT M16A1 GI PARTS KITS
ORIGINAL COLT PARTS FROM WAR SERVICE GUNS

Finally obtained a limited batch of Original Colt M16A1 Part Sets. Sight assembly and barrel parts were carefully stripped as barrels are prohibited from import by ATF regulations. All parts are original Colt mfg. Parts are generally in very good shape, but show wear and slight blemishes from 50 years of storage. All parts included except barrel, barrel extension, lower receiver and magazine. Upper receiver and bolt carriers are assembled. This is like being thrown back in time to the Vietnam era. Gotta move quickly on these as we have fewer than 100 in the best category!

Original Colt M16A1 parts kit made in the 1980's. Each kit features the triangular handguard, the teardrop forward assist and original bolt carrier group. Each kit comes with all parts including 1 x 30rd magazine (if legal - minus $10 if removed). All you need to complete your rifle build is a barrel and a stripped lower receiver. This is the only chance to get original vintage Colt kits. The conditions range from good to very good.

Barrel, and Lower Receiver - not included. Front sight assembly is in kit.

BEST GRADE KIT - Most parts in very good condition, some wear and worn finish may be apparent on some parts from their military service. These are graded as the best kits we have $595.00 AR400

STANDARD GRADE KIT - Comes with your choice of blemished original handguard set or a new current production handguard set. Specify your choice. Furniture shows a little more wear from military service & storage. Slight blemishes. May have small minor blemishes in handguards and butt pad..... $565.00 AR401

SPECIAL WITH KIT - New 20" proper barrel with extensions. Need to install front sight base from kit $135.00 AR405

NOTE: Barrel will be backordered & shipped as soon as received. We just got these kits and have to have the barrels made - OR, indicate you want a call when the barrels come in. These will be shipped AFTER all backorders are filled.

AR PISTOL KIT WITH 1 'SHOCKWAVE' BRACE (5.56MM)

Sarco has just received a small quantity of the AR Pistol Kits in 5.56mm, featuring the 'Shockwave' brace & 11.5" barrel with 1 in 7 twist. Super 'buy in' allows us to pass the savings onto you. All newly manufactured parts included, except lower receiver. Great little kit to get acquainted with for the latest and most fun shooting trend in the AR market $395.00 AR450

AR15/M16 4 X 20 MIL DOT SCOPE

One of the best utility scopes in its class, combining a rugged low profile housing with crystal clear 4 power optics bringing 100 feet up to 28 feet with stadia lines and 'mil dot' increments for 5.56 ammo. Scope has detachable base with view holes in case iron sights need to be used. Fits Picatinny rails or fits the A4 upper with mounting included in this package. Eye relief is 3.3 inches. Sale priced to move!..... $74.95 AR298

M4 16" COMPLETE BARRELED FLAT TOP UPPER ASSEMBLIES

Comes w/ bolt & carrier assembly
We have done the hard work for you. These are fully assembled upper halves complete and ready to drop on to your complete lower. All parts made in the U.S.A.! Includes Flat Top Upper, barrel assembly, complete bolt and carrier assembly, charging handle assembly, forward assist and ejection port cover assembly $265.00 ~~$295.00~~ AR013
Add ons: Kit with carry handle, rear sight assembly $285.00 ~~$324.00~~ AR014
Add ons: Lower parts kit and collapsible stock and carry handle..... $299.00 ~~$379.00~~ AR117

Note About Shipping:
Sarco deals with a lot of material that is very difficult to find and much of the original wartime material undergoes refinishing, manipulation, and repair as needed. With this in mind, we are not Amazon... While our aspiration is to ship your order quickly, some items may take a little more time to prepare so please be patient! Most orders go out quickly.

BRAND NEW M1 GARAND BARRELS
Currently produced in USA by a 30 Year Top Line Barrel MFG
.30-06 and .308 caliber barrels in stock !
Newly manufactured barrels ready to install on your M1 Garand Receiver. Made by one of the premier barrel manufacturers in the USA, these .30 06 caliber barrels and .308 barrels are manufactured from 4140 steel with 4 groove rifling and a 1 in 10 twist. Beautiful high quality parkerized replacement barrels. Because they are made here in the US, they do not have the ungainly import barrel markings. A great chance to get rid of that ‘Blue Sky’ or other import marked barrel and also restore accuracy! Barrels should always be installed by a qualified gunsmith.

BM59 MUZZLE BREAK FOR THE M1 GARAND RIFLE

Italian Army designed military muzzle break/flash hider coveted for its sleek sporty profile, made the BM59 and M1 Garand perform better and channel 'blast gases' away from the front sight view. This was one of the first major improvements the Italians made to the M1 Garand. Attaches to the Garand by taking off the gas cylinder lock, attaching the muzzle break and locking in with the gas cylinder screw.
Simple conversion and you can sell off your gas cylinder lock to cover all of the cost! Watch your rapid fire accuracy increase!..... $34.50 each BM59042

SIGHT BASE...

For Your Next Project!
Originally designed for the M1
Garand rifle, this great little sight base is perfect for your next project.
It allows you to actually add the superb and precise M1 Garand Rear Sight assy. components onto the weapon of your choice. Imagine having the ability to dial elevation and traverse measurements on a commercial or project rifle the same way you can on the Garand!
With the same ease and precision that you don't find on most rifles. The base has a concave bottom with 2 mounting holes.
Accepts the superior M1 Garand windage pinion & elevation aperture sold separately. Fits well on the Ruger 10-22 as well, but can be used on almost any project you come up with

SERIOUS ABOUT COMBAT SHOOTING? ROTO 4M COMPENSATED BARREL

DOD contractors have been buying up our Roto 4M barrels because they work! MODEL 1911 COMPENSATED BARRELS in 2 calibers will reduce recoil and speed your target acquisition especially during multiple shots. Takes minute to install our barrel that comes with Barrel Bushing and permanently attached and ported Compensator. Also there is less weight on the muzzle end than with conventional screw on muzzle compensators. Most people comment on the change of performance, but also that it looks great too! ROTO HAMMER FORGED 1911, 5" BARREL

Precise and consistent specs make these the barrel of choice for the 1911 pistol. These .45 cal. barrels are made in the USA and available at a Super price! $54.70 C45011

OUTSTANDING ASSORTMENT OF QUALITY 1911 BARRELS

ROTO 4M HAMMER FORGED .45 ACP, 9MM & .38 SUPER

Built to precise tolerance by a special hammer forging process, these barrels are the best you can buy! The hammer forging forms the barrel around a precision mandrel and holds the tolerance to .0001". This is much better than the typical broached barrels found elsewhere Note: 5" & 6" .45 barrels are L.H. twist - all others are R.H. twisted

COMPARE THE ROTO-4M BARREL FOR ROUNDNESS AGAINST A STANDARD BROACHED BARREL FROM A WELL KNOWN MANUFACTURER. ALL ROTO-4M BARRELS ARE MADE IN THE USA. Brand new extra length barrels for all Colt/1911/Government Model type automatic pistols. These barrels are made by the Special Roto-4M Hammer forge process which produces the most precise and consistent barrels for the best accuracy. Minor hand fitting may be necessary for some guns.

Barrels do not include link & pin. Link & pin available w/barrel purchase for additional $5.00 C45281 Available in:

MODEL 1911 BLACK NICKEL FINISH .45 MAGAZINE

7rd. magazine with 'Black Nickel Finish' looks amazing without being above the 'radar'. Super high end finish makes this magazine sleek and low profile as it reflects items around it with a soft glow. The finish is an extremely smooth, almost slippery feel which enhances loading and release of the magazine. This is the same finish used by Maserati and Breitling for many of their precision parts. The finish provides an extremely low coefficient of friction. The process of applying the finish is the addition of copper over the steel, addition of chromium, and then final coat of black nickel. Chromium adds to the cost, but improves durability & appearance $12.50 ea. RPM324

WORLD WAR I PATTERN .45 1911 MAGS WITH LANYARD LOOP
C45295 - 1911 mag with lanyard loop..... $11.95
Buy 3 mags for $34.95 and get a free pistol lanyard for the mags. These are rarely seen now a days. Best way to participate in fast combat shooting where you must drop and load mags quickly. Avoids damage to your dropped magazines. WWI Cavalry and vehicle crews would keep 2 or 3 mags on a lanyard for combat purposes! Original mags came with hemp twine so you could tie them to the lanyards individually. These magazines are made on the same automated machinery as our famous magazines shown above. This is the mag to have if you want to be serious about CQB firing and reloading quickly. Very popular for modern combat pistol tournaments.
SPECIAL OFFER! 2 lanyard loop mags w/lanyard and U.S. military double mag pouch $23.50 C45318

M3 FIGHTING KNIFE

M3 Knife w/ leather grip & M6 scabbard w/ WW2 markings. New $35.00 BAY331

Back In Stock!

ITALIAN M91 FIGHTING KNIFE WWII

Say what you will about the Italian Army in WW2.... But one thing is true, and that is the quality of their fighting instruments like the M91 knife were among the finest battle weapons. Our late production knife with scabbard is a terrific combat knife sporting an 8 inch steel blade, hardwood handle and scabbard with locking belt keeper. It has very good balance compared to most fighting knives that are usually way too heavy on the grip end. U.S. GIs loved to use them for knife throwing. Originals will cost you $400-800.....$26.95 BAY255

U.S. 1917 BOLO KNIFE & SCABBARD

Made is substantial numbers during WW1 and in several variations from 1897 to 1917, we can offer this full tang, tempered version of the 1917 model complete with period markings on knife & cloth and leather bound scabbard. This is a real 'Chopper', meant to use both blade and heft to hack things apart from fire wood to the 'Hun' in the Trench. With a little care, it will last a lifetime!.....$99.95 BAY321

WW2 GERMAN BOOT KNIFE & SCABBARD

Fighting knife or utility knife, this new made version of the venerable German 'trench knife' is convenient and easy handling. Blade is 5.5" inches long and steel scabbard has a 2-3/8 inch suspension clip. Wood slotted grips.....$24.95 BAY269 Iron cross not included

BRITISH SYKES FAIRBAIRN FIGHTING KNIFE W/ SCABBARD

GERMAN MODEL 1898 PIONEER SAWBACK BAYONET & SCABBARD

The longest of the WW1 German bayonets primarily associated with the Pioneer troops and NCOs. This 'Sawback' bayonet was the infantry's best chance of reaching out and touching the enemy before they could slice you. The Mauser Gew98 rifle looks wonderful with this bayonet mounted and the saw teeth are effective at cutting, but primarily used as a mark of distinction for NCOs who coveted them. The bayonet is of new manufacture, full length, and with appropriate marking on the ricasso and scabbard.....$75.00 BAY301

GERMAN MODEL 1898 / 05 SAWBACK BAYONET & SCABBARD

Commonly referred to in the family of German Butcher Blades, this was a second variation to the non-sawback butcher blade bayonet that chiefly became to the mainstay of WW1 German bayonets. The 'sawback' blade makes it quite intimidating and was far stronger than the 1898 sawback. Our new made bayonet comes with markings on the ricasso and is complete with steel scabbard.....$69.95 BAY302

U.S.G.I. M9 BAYONETS (RETURNED FROM DEPLOYMENT)

Afghan & Iraqi sandscapes were the combat testing grounds for the venerable M9 bayonets which adorn M16 & M4 rifles. Even after serving, these 420 stainless steel bayonets maintain their integrity, heft, and solid design features. Sarco has M9s as produced by Ontario, Phrobis, and LanCay and we offer them in a variety of patterns. Currently we can offer the following USGI retired M9 Bayonets with Scabbards:

M1 CARBINE BARRELS

New & Made to the G.I. Print !

Finally after decades of searching for M1 Carbine barrels worthy of consideration as a replacement on a GI issue Carbine, Sarco has obtained brand new U.S. made barrels in 4140 steel that are completely machined, bored, properly cut with inlets for the front sight, machined & swedged gas block/ piston, breech with proper hood not found on commercial barrels, and bore with a 1 in 20 twist! What better way to obtain an M1 Carbine barrel with the true military GI profile! Barrels are in the 'white', without finish. Finally you can be assured of the perfect replacement barrel for your M1 Carbine.
NOTE: features of this barrel also include :
Short chambered .015
Heat treated 4140 (28 30 RC)
Gas Cylinder/Block made from 4140 steel, rolled and swedged onto the barrel. These are NOT castings nor are they soldered or welded onto the barrel, but made from forged bar, pressed, swedged, and rolled into place as the original GI barrels were prepared!

U.S. Krag & 1903 Springfield Rifle Kerr Sling

Original pattern Kerr Sling as used on the Krag and 1903 Springfield rifles complete with the 'Nobuckl' sling hardware, correct weave, and khaki color. This was also originally used on the 1921 & 1928 Thompson SMG before they shortened it during the war. This is the best of the canvas wartime slings and original 'Kerr Rifle' slings are extremely hard to come by today! Long length of sling is @45", and short length is @14.5". New $22.00 SLNG104

NEW

Springfield Rifle Leather Kerr Sling

This was the most popular sling a 'sportsman' could get in the early part of the last century. Expensive to make, this leather sling sported the best brass latch and adjustment system of the day and even the military contracted for the brass Kerr 'NOBUCKL' system for their canvas slings from WW1 thru WW2. Fits loads of rifles and will last a lifetime of use. High quality and a classic! New..... $24.00 SLNG115

98 MAUSER SPORTER STOCKS W / BUTTPLATE

Found a small lot of beautiful hardwood 98 Mauser 'Sporter' Stocks tucked away in the ole' Sarco ammunition room hidden behind our Spanish Civil War 9mm Largo ammo. These are complete with raised comb, buttplate and grip cap at the base of the pistol grip. They have an interesting decorative grain and checkered pistol grip & forend with design. Perfect for 'sexing' up your old Mauser 98 barreled action! A high quality stock at a great price..... $89.95 MSR662

Note About Shipping:

Sarco deals with a lot of material that is very difficult to find and much of the original wartime material undergoes refinishing, manipulation, and repair as needed. With this in mind, we are not Amazon... While our aspiration is to ship your order quickly, some items may take a little more time to prepare so please be patient! Most orders go out quickly.

Manufacturers...

Sarco has contracted thousands of reproduction line items in metal, wood, leather & canvas products from different vendors. We would be pleased to hear from new Manufacturing vendors who can offer their services. Contact Mark or Dave. Email at mdotten@sarcoinc.com or mgdave@sarcoinc.com

SWEDISH MAUSER HIGH FRONT SIGHTS

Specially made tall front sights so you can zero your rifle at 100 yards. Most of these rifles shoot very high at short range as their minimum sight setting is 300 meters. Use of our high sight blade will allow you to get accurate sightings at 100 yards. Made to look like the original sights. These sights install in the existing dovetail. Made in U.S.A., Blued steel, Milspec quality, Swedish M96 and M38 Tall Front Sight. Now back in stock.....

SKS PHENOLIC STOCK W/ FOREND

China's military machine under Mao, ramped up production of Phenolic or synthetic stocks during the late 60s when it became clear that the tensions along the Sino Soviet border were intensifying toward 'all-out war'. Wood was too precious to strip for the manufacture of millions of Chinese SKS rifles so synthetics were applied to AKs and SKSs alike. Good stocks and getting hard to find. We have a few dozen original SKS stocks w/forend. Some minor color blemishes, but overall very good $74.95 SKS100

4 Main Component Parts are easy to install in a minute

NEW ITEM!

Thoroughly Field Tested for Reliability.
For use with 'STAMPED' receivers
Full size AK Magazine with an internal 30 rd. .22 LR insert ,runs flawlessly!

FINALLY!!!

A well tested AK47 conversion unit to change your 7.62x39 AK47 into a .22 cal. LR shooter. Four major component parts,(shown above), swap out within a minute with your 7.62 parts and allow you to start plink-ing quickly. The conversion set comes with a full size AK 30 rd. magazine which has an insert for .22 cal. ammo installed so the gun will still present itself as a standard AK47! Other sized .22 magazines will be available for this unit in the near future like 10 & 15 rd. These will be sold separately when available. This set is specifically for STAMPED Receiver AKs (Not Milled receivers - due to a difference in rails.) The .22 cal. barrel fits directly into the existing 7.62x39 barrel! Saves money and wear & tear on your AK and with lower noise & recoil, it's a joy to shoot!

LUGER PARTS

SWISS M1900 LUGER CLEANING KIT

Perhaps the most compact, quality component pistol cleaning kit every made! The Swiss Luger cleaning kit was issued with the pistol in brass or steel. Sarco just purchased 22K dollars of Luger parts in Switzerland and while the parts are nice, this item is the shining star in the deal! Most of the kits were missing some internal jags or brushes so we made some of the internals to complete the units. Sarco is pleased to offer the Brass kit complete with the 4 internal parts: bore brush, cleaning jag, jag extension, & rod/screwdriver. Solid brass body & cap are marked with the Swiss cross. 1888 BRITISH / BOER WAR .303
BANDOLIER

Soft Pliable Cow
Leather like the Originals! Finally, we were able to find a manufacturer to make this in soft rich 'Cow'with a much more supple feel and texture akin to the original bandolier.
Costs a little more than the Water Buffalo version, but addresses two of the drawbacks of the original. This one is longer and softer. Fits 50 rounds of .303 officially, but all sorts of other similar sized ammo like .30 and 7.62 Nato too. Fits well for people of Medium to 2XL build! The originals were fit for a lean poorly fed 19th century recruit! Buy 3 and wear a set up like Pancho Villa! New. Limited quantity..

ABOUT HIGH CAPACITY MAGAZINES:

Although we try to stay abreast of current State gun laws, it is a herculean task with over 20,000 laws on the books. By ordering, you are stating that you are complying with your Local & State laws. Most States allow large capacity magazines. Some do not. If you are unsure on this issue, contact your Local or State law enforcement to confirm what is allowed. This is a partial list of States with some hi-capacity restrictions:
NJ, NY, MA, MD, HI, KS, CO, CT, IL and various county laws therein including Chicago, D.C. CA residents - check your laws as they are changing.

How-to Firearm Videos

They don't want you to have!

Learn how to completely disassemble your guns down to the very last part!

Maintain, clean, and reassemble them with total confidence using these video training courses from AGI.

- This is Advanced Training on DVD with Classic Instruction by Master Gunsmiths, NOT just basic field stripping.
- You will learn detailed step-by-step Design, Function, and Operation of your specific model of firearm.
- AGI Armorer's Courses use cut-away guns to provide you with close-up views inside the firearms. You will not see this anywhere else!
- Training provides clear demonstrations of the internal workings of the firearm.
- You can't fix it unless you truly understand HOW the firearm is intended to work - now you'll know.
- This information is now Banned from YouTube due to the extremely detailed "How-to" firearms content.
- Get this training on DVD now, so you will have it available whenever you might need it.

Be an Expert on Every Gun you own!

Each AGI Armorer's Course DVD runs 90 minutes to 2 hours in length and covers the entire "family" of that particular model of firearm. Only $39.95 each plus s/h Buy two courses and get one FREE!

“False is the idea of utility that sacrifices a thousand real advantages for one imaginary or trifling inconvenience; that would take fire from men because it burns, and water because one may drown in it; that has no remedy for evils, except destruction.
The laws that forbid the carrying of arms are laws of such a nature. They disarm only those who are neither inclined nor determined to commit crimes. Can it be supposed that those who have the courage to violate the most sacred laws of humanity, the most important of the code, will respect the less important and arbitrary ones, which can be violated with ease and impunity, and which, if strictly obeyed, would put an end to personal liberty-so dear to men, so dear to the enlightened legislator-and subject innocent persons to all the vexations that the guilty alone ought to suffer?
Such laws make things worse for the assaulted and better for the assailants; they serve rather to encourage than to prevent homicides, for an unarmed man may be attacked with greater confidence than an armed man. They ought to be designated as laws not preventive but fearful of crimes, produced by the tumultuous impression of a few isolated facts, and not by thoughtful consideration of the inconveniences and advantages of a universal decree.” Cesare Beccaria, father of modern criminology, 1764.

(T)he advantage of being armed... the Americans possess over the people of almost every other nation.... (I)n the several kingdoms of Europe,... the governments are afraid to trust the people with arms.”
James Madison, The Federalist, 46.

“...the states cannot, even laying the constitutional provision in question out of view, prohibit the people from keeping and bearing arms, so as to deprive the United States of their rightful resource for maintaining the public security, and disable the people from performing their duty to the general government.” U.S. Supreme Court, 1886.

“The fifth and last auxiliary right of the subject, that I shall at present mention, is that of having arms for their defense, suitable to their condition and degree, and such as are allowed by law. (I)t is indeed a public allowance, under due restrictions, of the natural right of resistance and self-preservation, when the sanctions of society and laws are found insufficient to restrain the violence of oppression.” William Black-stone’s Commentaries on the Laws of England (1765), the most widely read law book in Colonial America.

"By this clause of the constitution, an express power is given and secured to all the free citizens of the state to keep and bear arms for their defence, without any qualification whatever as to their kind or nature...." Tennessee Supreme Court, 1833, concerning the Tennessee Constitution's right to keep and bear arms.

"The right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed; a well armed, and well regulated militia being the best security of a free country; but no person religiously scrupulous of bearing arms, shall be compelled to render military service in person." James Madison's first draft of the Second Amendment, June 8, 1789.

"The right of the people to keep & bear arms has been recognized by the General Government; but the best security of that right after all is, the military spirit, that taste for martial exercises, which has always distinguished the free citizens of these States;.... Such men form the best barrier to the liberties of America." Gazette of the United States, October 14, 1789, 211, col. 2.

"THE whole of the Bill (of Rights) is a declaration of the right of the people at large or considered as individuals... (I)t establishes some rights of the individual as unalienable and which consequently, no majority has a right to deprive them of." Albert Gallatin to Alexander Addison, October 7, 1789, manuscript in New York Historical Society, Albert Gallatin Papers, 2.

"A strong body makes the mind strong. As to the species of exercises, I advise the gun. While this gives moderate exercise to the body, it gives boldness, enterprise and independence to the mind. Let your gun, therefore, be the constant companion of your walks." Thomas Jefferson, 1785.

"Government being instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the whole community, and not for the private interest or emolument of any one man, family or class of men; therefore, whenever the ends of government are perverted, and public liberty manifestly endangered, and all other means of redress are ineffectual, the people may, and of right ought, to reform the old, or establish a new government. The doctrine of non-resistance against arbitrary power, and oppression, is absurd, slavish, and destructive of the good and happiness of mankind." New Hampshire Constitution of 1784.

"But to be in conflict with the constitution, it is not essential that the act should contain a prohibition against bearing arms in every possible form; it is the right to bear arms in defense of the citizens and the state, that is secured by the constitution, and whatever restrains the full and complete exercise of that right, though not an entire destruction of it, is forbidden by the explicit language of the constitution." Kentucky Supreme Court, 1822, concerning the Kentucky Constitution's right to keep and bear arms.

"The fifth and last auxiliary right of the subject, that I shall at present mention, is that of having arms for their defense, suitable to their condition and degree, and such as are allowed by law. (I)t is indeed a public allowance, under due restrictions, of the natural right of resistance and self-preservation, when the sanctions of society and laws are found insufficient to restrain the violence of oppression." William Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England (1765), the most widely read law book in Colonial America.

"That the people have a right to bear arms for the defence of themselves and their own state, or the United States, or for the purpose of killing game; and no law shall be passed for disarming the people or any of them, unless for crimes committed, or real danger of public injury from individuals...." "The Address and Reasons of Dissent of the Minority of the Convention" in the Pennsylvania Packet and Daily Advertiser, December 18, 1787.

"(T)he whole history of mankind proves that so far from parting with the powers actually delegated to it, government is constantly encroaching on the small pittance of rights reserved by the people to themselves and gradually wresting them out of their hands until it either terminates in their slavery or forces them to arms, and brings about a revolution." Luther Martin, delegate to the Philadelphia Convention, March 28, 1788.

"The laws that forbid the carrying of arms...disarm only those who are neither inclined nor determined to commit crimes...Such laws make things worse for the assaulted and better for the assailants; they serve rather to encourage than to prevent homicides, for an unarmed man may be attacked with greater confidence than an armed man." Cesare Beccaria, father of modern criminology, 1764.

"Mr. Madison has introduced his long expected amendments. They are the fruit of much labor and research. He has hunted up all the grievances and complaints of newspapers, all the articles of convention, and the small talk of their debates. It contains a bill of rights, the right of enjoying property, of changing the government at pleasure, freedom of the press, of conscience, of juries, exemption from general warrants.... Oh! I had forgot, the right of the people to bear arms...." Rep. Fisher Ames of Massachusetts, June 11, 1789, describing the Bill of Rights.

"A strong body makes the mind strong. As to the species of exercises, I advise the gun. While this gives moderate exercise to the body, it gives boldness, enterprise and independence to the mind. Let your gun, therefore, be the constant companion of your walks." Thomas Jefferson, 1785.
